

Juicing your ride
Power ports and other devices for motorists p98

Crisis in Japan

Opening Remarks Japan faces unprecedented times. But even amid radiation and rubble, it is not hopeless. Plus: America needs an honest debate over nuclear power. p11

Global Economics How the disasters in Japan will affect the crippled Asian nation—and the world. p16

Stress along the global supply chain	p18
The impact on American companies	p19
A debt-burdened country faces a huge reconstruction tab	p20
Searching for clues along the Ring of Fire	p22
Prime Minister Kan's Katrina moment	p23
Charlie Rose talks to Duke Energy CEO Jim Rogers	p26

The damage done A tsunami-hit residential area in Otsuchi, Japan

Companies & Industries

29

Nestlé Goes Upscale

To cope with volatile commodity prices, the Swiss food giant is turning to premium products

China's richest man wants to go shopping p30

Diamonds are a guy's best friend, too p31

The department store lives p32

Fake weed, real profits p33

Briefs: Renault, UBS, more p34

Politics & Policy

37

The oil price payoff

Higher energy costs could give a boost to White House plans for clean fuel, electric vehicles, and solar

A pay disclosure rule that companies abhor p39

The (hidden) GOP money primary begins p39

Obama's Latin America trip will focus on energy, construction—and countering China p40

Features

64

The Trouble With Repatriation

Apple, Cisco, Google, and others say they'll bring billions in earnings home—if they get big tax breaks. Here's why this holiday is no picnic p64

Are Four Words Worth $25 Billion?

The digital coupon outfit Groupon is betting "I'm hungry" and "I'm bored" can transform the multibillion-dollar market for local commerce p70

A Boom Behind Bars

Private jail operators such as the Corrections Corporation of America are making millions off the crackdown on illegal aliens p76

Etc.

91

Too Many Post-its Are Never Enough

In a shaky job market, office hoarding—did someone say "stealing"?—is on the rise

Beauty From "messy and beachy" to "sleek and smooth": Los Angeles chain Drybar is fueling a haute hair-drying craze p94

Perks At Colorado's New Belgium Brewing, workers revel in rewards and suds p96

Hands On With these auto gizmos, you'll look forward to your commute p98

One True Thing A passport case to make you look worldly p100

The Stack Cities might be cramped and a little dirty, but as Harvard economist Edward Glaeser argues, they can have "magical consequences" p102

Hard Choices After five years as CEO of Young & Rubicam in New York, Hamish McLennan gave it all up and headed home to Sydney with his family p104

Technology

43

An online identity crisis

A Web icon's Facebook slam and plea for anonymity made waves at South by Southwest

The Alan Greenspan of digital advertising p44

Questions about Verizon's big high-speed fiber bet p46

Innovator: A self-powered device to monitor the seas p47

Markets & Finance

49

Pandit's gambit

Citigroup's chief is staking the bank's future on emerging markets. It's a perilous path

Is Russia risky? Two top investors disagree p50

After Bear Stearns p51

Bond investors see a bust p53

Paris's pricey apartments p54

Bid & Ask: The week's deals p55

Focus on Health Care

57

Takeda Pharmaceutical is counting on Deborah Dunsire to help it conquer the oncology drug market p57

The surge in sales of gene sequencing machines p58

Home-care companies brace for regulation p60

Vertex's promising cystic fibrosis treatment p61