

Opening Remarks

6

If Congress fails to raise the debt ceiling, the U.S. begins defaulting—and all hell breaks loose. But that won't stop the brinkmanship

Plus: Charlie Rose talks to Paul Ryan p9

Global Economics

11

Libya and the oil industry
Hedging bets with Qaddafi, talking to the rebels

China needs nuclear energy and nuclear safety p12

Why short sales of homes take so long p13

Argentina vs. the grain giants p15

Tom Keen's EconoChat p15

Seven days ahead p16

Companies & Industries

19

An Alfa Romeo makeover
Fiat needs a global luxury brand to boost its profitability. Alfa is the carmaker's only option

Adult supervision for American Apparel p21

Disney in China, take 2 p21

Sidney Harman: 1918-2011 p24

GE and Siemens seek profits in helping hospitals cut costs p24

Briefs p26

Politics & Policy

29

Elizabeth Warren's fate
She masterminded the new consumer protection agency. Her chances of running it now look slim

Fireworks in Costa Mesa over a move to lay off almost half the town's employees p30

Caterpillar in Colombia p32

Debt-busting: a global tour p35

Budget winners and losers p36

Technology

39

EBay's key to China
By linking Chinese exporters to global customers, the auction site is finally making inroads

Tilera builds a chip for the cloud computing age p41

Japanese shoppers loosen up online p42

Innovator: Making nuclear power safer and cleaner p43

Markets & Finance

45

Rajat Gupta and "friends"
Why the well-connected former chief of McKinsey started doing business with the wrong crowd

A $1 billion price tag to stave off Energy Future's default p47

Goldman Sachs's slow progress in India p48

The shine is off the new GM p49

A hotel king is ready to sell p50

Bid & Ask: The week's deals p51

Education

53

MBAs off the beaten path
B-school career offices are chasing a new breed of employer for students looking beyond Wall Street

The pros and cons of T. Boone Pickens's generosity to alma mater Oklahoma State p54

Shanghai's high-impact education reforms p55

Speed Dial: Brown University President Ruth Simmons p55

Download now!
The new Bloomberg Businessweek iPad App

Features

58

This Bubble Is Different

Tech bubbles happen, but we usually gain from the innovation left behind. This one—driven by social networking—could leave us empty-handed p58

The Real Deficits of Nassau County

It's New York's wealthiest county, and one of the richest in the entire country. So how in the world did Nassau County manage to go broke? p66

A Battle Royale for Supercorn

Scientists are closing in on nitrogen-efficient corn. Success could slash America's $8 billion fertilizer bill and boost air and water quality p72

Etc.

81

Welcome to the Balkan Riviera

Porto Montenegro is about to open for its first season. Bring on the oligarchs and their superyachts

Casting We asked the experts who should star in a Bernie Madoff biopic. For starters, picture Dustin Hoffman as the schemer himself p84

One True Thing A weekend bag that's logo-free and comfortable in a convertible p86

Spinoff The latest superfood—dragon fruit—is already a Febreze scent p87

Fashion Known as the Bra Whisperer, Susan Nethero has built her Intimacy lingerie chain into a 16-store fiefdom on the promise of a perfect fit p88

The Stack In Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen's new memoir, he drops names, settles scores, and explains what ails the behemoth he helped create p90

Hard Choices Areva's Anne Lauvergeon on nuclear power—and rejecting Sarkozy p92