

Stocking stuffers

Brighten up workplace grays with bold socks p80

Opening Remarks

4

Human workers are losing out to robots in more and more fields—yet coexistence is possible

Bloomberg View The EU needs one bank overseer; how to allow same-sex marriage p6

Global Economics

9

Foundering factories

Manufacturing, cited as the linchpin to the recovery, may be headed for or already in recession

Italy: Jobs vs. pollution p10
India's free-speech debate p12
The upside to old appliances p12
Xi Jinping's flying start p13
A Fed vote for easy money p13
The week ahead p14

Companies & Industries

17

Libya's sweet tooth

Cinnabon is at the vanguard of a potential business boom in the oil-rich country

Will hearts bleat for Uggs? p18
Rough weather for Eastern European airlines p19
Drug research's makeover p20
A banner year for sex toys p22
Briefs: The mobile pix wars p24

Politics & Policy

27

The GOP's identity quest

Challenging Tea Party orthodoxy, Republicans are looking to their past as the party of big ideas

Super PAC, super gig p29
Lunatics, worry no more p29
For ambassadors, it helps to be rich p30
The mystique of Simpson-Bowles p32

Quick study
China's Xi Jinping p13

Technology

35

Samsung's strategy

The Korean giant is chasing Apple in the market for business customers

There's life in video game consoles yet p36
John Sculley seeks the Steve Jobs of health care p38
Hiring through social media p41
Innovator: iPhone sensors p42

Markets & Finance

45

Global banking in retreat

How proposed U.S. capital rules on foreign lenders are changing the game for international firms

A 21st century reckoning for Italy's 15th century bank p46
China's investment trusts: Big, bold, and vulnerable p48
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p50
Charlie Rose/AlG's chief p52

Different strokes The Ironman World Championship in Hawaii p62

Features

54

Walmart vs. Walmart

Employee group OUR Walmart—don't call them a union—is demanding respect and better pay. After Black Friday protests, Walmart is paying attention p54

Misery, VIP'd

Status-conscious triathlete executives get pampered while they suffer through the world's toughest competition p62

A $314.9 Million Losing Ticket

Ten years ago, Jack Whittaker, a self-made businessman, became the biggest single winner in lottery history. And that's when his luck ran out p68

Etc.

77

Conquering the Business of Joy

Gabrielle Bernstein is the profitable spiritual guru to young professional women

Office Style When you care enough to give the gift of colorful socks p80
Retail A day in the life of a nervous temp at an upmarket British department store p82
Conspicuous Consumption Carrie Mathison, Homeland's white-collar hero, plus 12 months of "oops" moments in businesses p84
The Stack Business leaders and economists' favorite books in 2012 p86
Hard Choices François-Henri Pinault on why he made Alexander Wang creative director of Balenciaga p88