

Bloomberg

BusinessWeek

In Depth

Immelt at the Crotonville campus, a training ground for GE leaders since 1956

26 Can GE Get Its Juice Back?

The $157 billion conglomerate has long been famed for turning out top executive talent. But post-financial meltdown, Jeff Immelt is rethinking GE's 50-year-old approach to developing leaders

34 The 50 Most Innovative Companies

Reflecting what one prominent consultant calls "the beginning of a new world order," 15 of this year's Top 50 are Asian, with China rising fastest of all. How Asia is ascending, and where the West still dominates

44 Turkey Seizes Its Moment

Thanks to tighter regulation, surging foreign investment, and, above all, Premier Erdoğan's reforms, Turkey's boom-and-bust economy is back on a stable growth track. Can it keep up the pace?

48 The Accountant Of Coal

Massey Energy CEO Don Blankenship says "greeniacs" are out to destroy America. Critics see a ruthless provocateur whose drive for profits set the stage for a mine explosion that killed 29

Malone's Continental shopping spree

The Business Week

- 06 | Executive Summary Dow 11,000; Europe's Greece bailout; the Lexus GX 460; Conan on TBS
- 13 | At the Table Charlie Rose talks with Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong
- 16 | Business Outlook Inventories are finally being rebuilt, which will help prop up the recovery

New Business

- 18 | Can China Turn Off the Heat? The economy needs to slow down. But austerity is a tough sell

22 | The Cloud Over the Banks

Earnings at the big banks are up, but bad home-equity loans could damage balance sheets more than investors expect

23 | Goodbye, Andy Stern

It will be a long time before labor produces a leader as farseeing—or controversial—as the departing SEIU boss

24 | Green Days

Eco-energy companies are attracting ample capital and benefiting from generous state support

25 | John Malone's Grand Tour

Armed with a $4 billion war chest, the King of Cable is making a new run at the Old World

What's Next

- 52 | Washington Beer Brawl Big brewers are at the center of an esoteric debate over how to regulate derivatives
- 54 | Vulcan Contrarian Vulcan Value Partners founder C.P. Fitzpatrick sees Google as a value play (really)
- 55 | The Pill at 50 Israel's Teva is out to steal share from Bayer in oral contraceptives by pushing into the underserved markets of the Far East
- 56 | Big Pharma Looks East As they eye Asia, drugmakers are cutting prices, opting for sales volume over high margins

58 | India's Wharton?

The Indian School of Business in Hyderabad aims to be No. 1 at teaching how to manage in emerging markets

Personal Business

- 59 | Money Report U.S. investors snap up Canadian bonds; why Wall Street loves Mondays; Pep Boys looks peppier
- 60 | Inheriting Trouble There's no federal estate tax in 2010, but heirs this year may be subject to stiff capital-gains taxes
- 62 | Retiring without Retiring YourEncore, on the Web, links scientists and engineers with the companies that need them most

Brewers throw their weight around in D.C.

Making financial literacy a civil right

Business Views

- 64 | Books Johnson and Kwak: 13 Bankers
- 66 | Feedback Obamanomics is working? A reader begs to differ

68 | Outside Shot

John Hope Bryant: Raising financial literacy will boost the U.S. economy

66 | Corrections & Clarifications

67 | Index of Companies and People