

License to kill?
The drone program needs tougher guidelines p4

Opening Remarks

4

Drones aren't going away, and more transparency on how and when they're used is a must

Bloomberg View A road map on climate change; challenges for the next pope p6

Global Economics

9

Home sweet asset

The latest data suggest most Americans still have too much of their wealth tied up in where they live

China's next conquest may be minerals in Greenland p11
A Harvard prof's euro cure p12
Tom Keene's EconoChat p14
Nikkei fever again p14
The week ahead p16

Companies & Industries

18

Buy yourself a Nascar

For the first time since the '60s, the stock car circuit is helping automakers sell regular cars

Sony's bet on PlayStation 4 p20
Whatever became of all those Walmart health clinics? p21
Yes, your cable service can improve—but it'll cost you p22
Briefs: The FDA's fast track p23

Politics & Policy

24

Congress logs on

It's been behind the curve on the Internet for decades. Why that's about to change

An abortion pill crackdown p25
The military buys up BP oil p26
Who loves Obamacare? p27
Tax preparers p27
Stopping smartphone thefts p27
Charlie Rose/Dick Cheney p29

Technology

31

The Jetsons, for real

If SmartThings has its way, household goods may soon spring into action without your lifting a finger

Netflix's House of Cards p32
Inking's smarter e-books p33
Antivirus software may fail, but that's not crimping sales p34
Innovator: Francisco Aguilar's boost for first responders p35

BBW50

37

The Bloomberg Businessweek 50

The top-performing U.S. companies span media, health care, and retail

Actavis: The No. 4 generic drugmaker is growing fast p39
Salesforce: Cloud king p39
Time Warner: Digital strides p41
Whole Foods: Fattening up p42
Breaking down the BBW50 p44

Markets & Finance

47

The next Suze Orman?

With $25 million in backing, Alexa von Tobel may make LearnVest the personal finance site to beat

Poland's fracking fracas p49
Funny money Ignites Dubai's real estate explosion p49
Indonesia's bank boom p50
Cambridge in the bank biz p51
Bid & Ask: Selling 30 Rock p52

Resting place A heat-sealable body bag marketed for mass casualties

Features

54

To Catch a Hacker

Malware from China is flooding the Internet—and it's increasingly directed at U.S. corporations and government agencies. Usually the perps cover their tracks. Not this time p54

Salesmen of the Apocalypse

Hurricanes, floods, and other calamities cost $200 billion in 2012. As the tab rises, so do the prospects for making big bucks off disasters p60

Reinventing the Showroom

Drivers love Audis; it's the dealers they loathe. Enter Continuum, a design firm whose goal is a better shopping experience, not prettier products p66

Etc.

71

My Big Night With Jake Gyllenhaal

Winners of meet-a-celebrity lotteries reveal just how awesome lunch with Steve Case really is

Food Check that burger—horse meat is turning up in beef, and not just in Ireland p74
Econ 101 Watch and learn: A Penn State prof proffers economic theory with clips of everything from The Dark Knight to It's a Wonderful Life p75
Travel Prime powder, shorter lines, swankier après: Ski trips you'll actually enjoy p76
Conspicuous Consumption Po Bronson and Ashley Merryman's Top Dog: The Science of Winning and Losing argues that unselfish teamwork is overrated p78
Hard Choices How do you tell a fighting legend it's time to quit? That's what Ultimate Fighting Championship's Dana White had to do with Chuck Liddell p80