

Opening Remarks A global tax on the superrich? Maybe it's not such a crazy idea 10

Bloomberg View The U.S.'s next move in Afghanistan • Bobby Jindal's Obamacare fixes 12

Global Economics

Falling bond yields are usually a sign of strength. In Europe, they could mean deflation 14

Low-level "flies," elite "tigers"—they're all getting caught up in Xi's anticorruption dragnet 15

A Modi victory would strengthen India's ties with Japan 16

Millennials suffered disproportionately from the recession—not glad tidings for consumer spending 17

Correlations: If you buy cigs in a high-tax state, you might be blowing smuggled smoke 18

Companies/Industries

Forget convertibles. Today, Thelma and Louise would drive an SUV 21

Abu Dhabi's Etihad Airways spent lavishly, and perhaps not wisely, on its network of carriers 22

An unwelcome corporate perk in China 24

Peeps aren't just for Easter anymore 24

Briefs: Toyota, back in the recall ditch; P&G swears off pet food 25

Politics/Policy

John Roberts's canny campaign to move the Supreme Court to the right 27

Thousands of fed-up New Yorkers quit the city for Austin. Seriously 29

So many new Medicaid patients, so few doctors who will treat them 30

Where all that Medicare money goes 30

Americans loathe taxes. So why do they pay them so faithfully? 31

Technology

Storage service Dropbox expands to beat back well-funded rivals 32

For Intrade, fantasy sports games offer a first step back into betting 34

Charlie Rose talks with Twitter co-founder Biz Stone 35

Many U.S. retailers probably won't meet a deadline meant to reduce credit card fraud 36

Innovation: A way to use plastic at vending machines built for cash 37

Markets/Finance

The SEC is taking its time coming up with rules for speed traders 39

In a sizzling market, collectors give long-sighted artists a second look 40

Coca-Cola buys a stake in a coffee company—and short sellers get burned 41

Running for New York State Assembly, ex-Wall Streeter Gus Christensen sounds more like an Occupier 42

Bid/Ask: Mallinckrodt buys Questor; anyone want a Hearst mansion? 43

Features

Soul Searcher El-Erian's exit at Pimco forces co-founder Bill Gross to reconsider everything 48

Goddess for Congress Marianne Williamson envisions winning America's richest district 54

Samsung's War Deaths at a chipmaking plant affect South Korea's corporate-is-king mentality 60

Etc.

With her shoe line, Sarah Jessica Parker targets women who can't afford Louboutins 67

Marketing: Peet's teams up with Razorfish to satisfy your java fix online 70

Ask a Billionaire: James Dyson hates to fire anyone 70

Travel: Attention, first- and business-class passengers—airlines are upgrading the art of pampering 71

Menswear: Leather jackets that work with a stylish office wardrobe 72

The Critic: Hollywood hopes Heaven is for real, and also a blockbuster 74

What I Wear to Work: Cara Turano, in male-dominated IT, isn't one of the boys 75

How Did I Get Here: "You can have it all," says moviemaker Jane Rosenthal, "but you can't have it all at the same time" 76

"I love Bill Gross. There isn't a bad photo of him. Every single one is great."

"Indiana Gross."

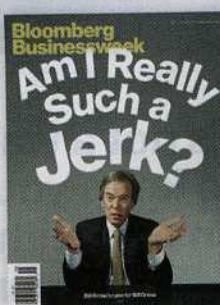

"Perplexed, confused, unwound, uncertain ... unusable."

"This picture will never leave me. It's seared itself into my retinas. Everywhere I look, all I see is a squatting fund manager."

"Oh, the humanity. But we have to remember this is a story about bond management."

"Can we do a Bill Gross cover every week?"