

Opening Remarks Obama can't find the exit in Afghanistan 8

Bloomberg View Europe's data divide • Boehner—raise the debt ceiling before you go 10

Global Economics

Turkey under Erdogan is doing battle—with business 12

Russians are suspicious of the U.S., but they're still flocking there 13

Scandal sidetracks Malaysia's prime minister 14

In Denmark, the key rate is minus 0.75 percent. Yes, you read that right 15

Bordeaux, grappling with climate change, contemplates life after merlot 16

Companies/Industries

Big Pharma scours the dark net to catch sellers of fake, sometimes lethal drugs 18

With parking spaces running $2,500 a year, Tokyo's twentysomethings turn to car-sharing 19

Starbucks orders up a venti video drive-thru 20

Briefs: Ferrari floors it to $4 billion in its IPO; Subway axes antibiotics 21

Politics/Policy

California's electric companies take on the filling station 22

Peeking into their portfolios, Supreme Court justices find they aren't blind 23

Fantasy sports confront the reality of tighter regulation 24

Want to buy an air base in Afghanistan? Don't let never-ending war stop you 24

Technology

Like nesting dolls, Russian hackers hide inside other hackers 27

Uber and Lyft bring ride-sharing (and data-sharing!) to Portland, Ore. 29

A court says Google Books can go ahead and upload, well, all the words 29

The cute little robots trying to Fetch packages better than Amazon 30

Innovation: Games that do more than build hand-eye coordination 31

Markets/Finance

No easy fixes in the worsening U.S. retirement crisis 33

Steve Wynn and other billionaires tap their art for cheap loans 34

Platinum Partners follows the money, no matter where it leads 35

BlackRock starts a socially conscious mutual fund to appeal to younger clients 36

Bid/Ask: Oprah joins Weight Watchers; a record-setting bull market 37

Focus On/B-Schools

MBA programs aren't making much of a dent in the gender pay gap 39

Bloomberg ranks the top business schools 40

Crunching the numbers for today's grads 42

Features

Game On Can Bonnie Ross, Halo's guardian, deliver for Microsoft? 44

Emissions Impossible How Volkswagen got caught 50

Move Over, Edison The new No. 1 U.S. inventor wants to create one supervaccine for life 56

Etc.

Hip-hop mogul Lyor Cohen is looking for his next act 75

Travel: A coast-to-coast craft distillery crawl 78

Workplace: Testing AI personal assistants that are almost as good as humans 80

Marketing: Ripped-from-the-headlines Halloween costumes get more action on Twitter than they do in stores 81

The Critic: The end of tipping could be the beginning of better restaurants 82

What I Wear to Work: Va_a White k_ows what a Va_a White dress shou_d_ook_ike 83

How Did I Get Here? Don't ask Land Rover's Gerard McGovern about all the cars he's worked on—he can't remember 84

1 "The cover's on Bonnie Ross, who's headed up the making of Halo 5."

"That must be a fun job."

"It is, but there's also a lot of pressure for it to succeed—it's taken hundreds of programmers, tens of millions of dollars, and three years to produce. It's also why many people own an Xbox."

"That sounds less fun. We should just shoot Ross with a Halo 5 character—whoever the main one is."

2 "Great photo."

"Yep."

"Also—do you get 'Halo Mary'? It's a pun."

"Her name isn't Mary."

3 "'Gun Runner,' because she runs the show. And the show is a game with guns. And she's holding a gun."

"No."

4 "Master Chief."

"Isn't that the name of the character?"

"Yes."

"But it's about her."

