

Hold the Champers
Wall Street doesn't woo new hires like it used to p69

Opening Remarks

4

In 1992, the U.S. economy seemed crippled. Then deficits dropped, productivity popped, and job growth soared. What could help stoke today's moribund economy? Radical tax reform

Global Economics

7

Japan's yen obsession
Its currency is at a 15-year high, but are Japan's leaders now mistakenly trying to cure a symptom?

In China, an oversupply of new college grads p8
Italy's floating tax dodgers p10
The wildfires in Russia haven't burned Putin's reputation p11
Britain's down-at-heel youth are abandoning pubs and clubs p12
Tom Keene's EconoChat p12

Companies & Industries

15

New woes for WashPo
Its main profit center is now education unit Kaplan, which may soon be rocked by student loan reforms

Chinese carmaker BYD hits a potential legal land mine p16
Customizable chocolate p18
How P&G is taking Tide to the cleaners p20
U.S. B-schools: Caught in a cycle of edifice building p20
Briefs p21

Politics & Policy

23

The EPA's power play
Against a storm of dissent, EPA chief Lisa Jackson is using the Clean Air Act to control carbon emissions

Will Russ Feingold get railroaded in November? p24
Tony Blair, surprise Tory p25
Meet the CIA of finance p26
The 2,300-page finance-reform law holds many surprises p27

Carbon Cop
Jackson's next regulatory move p23

Insatiable China's appetite for resources is transforming Australia

Features

44

Red Star Over Australia

The deal is simple. Australia gets money, China gets Australia p44

Niche-Market Madoff

The uncovering of a Ponzi scheme that exploited a surprisingly perfect dupe: The FBI p50

The Duke of Discomfort

Ryanair CEO Michael O'Leary is remaking air travel in his own image: shabby, crabby, and cheap p58

A Celebrity Chef's Educated Palate

As his peers slap their names on frozen pizzas, Ferran Adrià of El Bulli heads for Harvard p62

Etc.

69

Wall Street's New Sobriety

"Sell night," the August ritual of wooing potential hires over steaks and strippers, is over—for now

Art The unexpected art collections of John Deere, Bayer, and the Dallas Cowboys p72
Next Life Tragedy led Monique Péan toward jewelry making and away from Goldman Sachs. Now Michelle Obama's wears her creations p74
Hands On Two devices that raise a ruckus when you leave your cell phone behind p75
Navigator A personalized guide to camping—from roughing it in the Gobi to tenthouse suites overlooking the Pacific p76
The Stack Higher Education? offers a glimmer of hope for U.S. college students p78
Hard Choices Willis Group CEO Joe Plumeri tells why his company, alone among insurance brokers, has forgone lucrative contingent commissions p80

Technology

29

Intel inside everything?

Weaker PC sales have spurred the chipmaker to ramp up its bets on embedded processors

Apple's focus shifts to TV p30
An overseas shopping spree for U.S. technology companies p31
LinkedIn's global ambitions p32
Making hay from China's Internet censorship p33
David Margolis has a simple goal: Cure AIDS p34

Markets & Finance

37

Battle of the brokers

It has fewer advisers, yet Merrill Lynch's brokerage unit has a big edge over Morgan Stanley's in profit

Citi has China-sized expansion plans for China p38
Colorado's frozen ski resort p39
Wilbur Ross goes where Buffett fears to tread p41
Profits are soaring. So why are buy ratings so scarce? p41
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p42