

In the bag
Your purse and your personality p76

Opening Remarks

6

Some of the freshest thinking in economics is decades old. For new ideas, dismal scientists are turning to the Depression-era insights of John Maynard Keynes and Friedrich Hayek

Global Economics

9

Power in the people

Countries with fast-rising working-age populations will be the future economic growth leaders

Diamond smuggling thrives in Zimbabwe	p11
Mao nostalgia in China	p12
Why that 101st employee is such a problem in India	p13
Singapore's Prime Minister on the U.S. and China	p13
Seven days ahead	p14

Companies & Industries

16

Cash in Big Oil's trash

BP, Shell, and others are getting top prices for properties they thought they'd struggle to unload

DuPont: CEO Kullman's bet	p17
Universal Music hopes for a buzz from American Idol	p18
How cell providers get rich serving the poor	p19
Marilyn Monroe and others are resurrected by marketers	p20
Briefs	p21

Politics & Policy

22

Is it safe to hire again?

U.S. companies won't add workers in earnest until they're convinced the recovery is real

The Administration's internal debate on tax reform	p24
Bill Daley, fixer-in-chief	p25
A shaky start for high-risk insurance pools	p26
China comes to do deals	p27

Technology

28

Microsoft, only Kinect!

The gaming accessory offers the tech giant a rare opportunity to harness the enthusiasm of hackers

A weird and wonderful CES	p30
iPhone: The pros and cons of Verizon vs. AT&T	p31
Charlie Rose talks to Verizon CEO Ivan Seidenberg	p32
Speeding up gene research	p34

Markets & Finance

36

Playing the rumor mill

The jump in stock prices of companies named in takeover chatter is often short-lived

Big banks, big legal bills	37
Morgan Stanley has something to prove	p38
Why a housing rebound won't lift the economy	p39
The stock-bond hybrid that burned investors	p40
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p42

Enterprise

45

Healthy new business

Vending-machine startups are offering schools something besides potato chips and cookies

When it comes to IRS audits, size matters	p46
Why St. Louis beer fans are drinking more Schlafly	p47
Brett King on what small business needs from banks	p47
A D&B spin-off for the Internet age	p48

Shooting star The Glock is simple, quick-firing, and utterly reliable

Features

50

America's Gun

How Glock became the weapon of choice for U.S. cops, gun enthusiasts, and mass killers like alleged Tucson gunman Jared Loughner p50

Unmasking Chinese Fakes

When a retiree in Texas discovered that some mainland companies listed in the U.S. are frauds, he unleashed an army of short-sellers p58

Home Depot's Fix-It Lady

Chief Financial Officer Carol Tomé has a chance at becoming the next CEO—if she can help drag the company's technology into the 21st century p64

Etc.

69

Danger, Will Robinson! Your Cubemate is a Robot Tomorrow's office is likely to include workers that are smarter, faster, more responsible—and not human

Food Gay sports bars are popping up around the U.S., and cleaning up	p72
Next Life Former Hong Kong banker Jose Cortes turned a passion for African wildlife into a business adventure	p74
One True Thing Fitness gear for New Year's resolution keeper and gym rat alike	p75
Office Lab Your purse is talking about you. A guide to what it's saying	p76
The Stack In American Plastic , Sociologist Laurie Esseg traces Americans' fixation back to Reagan-era tax cuts and deregulation and rising economic insecurity	p78
Hard Choices American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten on public education, teacher bonuses, and why unions are so unpopular	p80