

How the cover gets made

Opening Remarks The Ukraine crisis is a test of U.S. power—and a reminder of its limits 10

Bloomberg View Cleaning up China's air • Paul Ryan critiques the welfare state 14

Global Economics

For FedEx and UPS, China is not offering overnight delivery of regulatory approval 16

A downward revision of U.S. potential GDP shows economic damage from the recession may be permanent 17

The high price of cheap diesel fuel in India 18

Janet Yellen will be spending a lot of time on Capitol Hill this year, as Republicans try to rein in the Fed 20

Correlations: A link between broadband access and income in emerging economies 21

Companies/Industries

A $1 billion experiment turns Disneyland into a place where everybody knows your name 22

Fiat picks an Italian plant to build a new pint-size Jeep 23

With the cost of training high and starting pay low, pilots are in short supply at regional carriers 24

Charlie Rose talks to former BP CEO John Browne 25

About 10 percent of MLB players are cleared to take ADHD drugs. Despite the raised eyebrows, many may need it 26

Briefs: Adidas warns it could be tripped up by exchange rates; Facebook shows interest in drones 27

Politics/Policy

Comcast's subtle, sophisticated approach to winning over Washington 29

Home health providers are bracing for big cuts under Obamacare 30

A federal judge accuses lawyers suing Chevron of "bribery" and "coercion" 31

Afghanistan tries to build a national railway from scratch 32

Technology

Whisper and Secret allow you to post your innermost thoughts, anonymously, for millions to see 35

Microsoft has a lot riding on the Xbox One game Titanfall 37

Russian online retailers let shoppers pick up their orders 37

Google is taken to court for going through your Gmail 38

Innovation: Cancer-spotting goggles may help ensure surgeons don't miss stray diseased cells 39

Markets/Finance

The hot market for tech IPOs gives some investors flashbacks to 1999 41

The private equity firm that delivered efficiency to Little Caesars and Tesla 42

Treasury bond buyers quit worrying about rate hikes 44

In his battle to force a PayPal spinoff, Icahn turns his guns on EBay board member Marc Andreessen 44

Bid/Ask: To take on Lego, Mattel snaps up Mega Bloks; Philadelphia Gas Works goes private 45

Focus On/Retirement

With 401(k) employer contributions, even a little more can mean a lot 47

A proposal by Senator Tom Harkin for retirement reform 49

Nothing is certain but death and taxes—and immediate annuities 50

Giving boomer entrepreneurs a boost 51

Retirement communities change with the times 52

Features

Mojave Man As California's drought drags on, a lawyer looks under the desert for water 54

Heir to Ailes Newsmax founder and CEO Chris Ruddy is remaking conservative media 60

Fix This/Big Data Four experts discuss the promise—and possible pitfalls—of data mining 64

Etc.

Don't let workplace feedback grind you down 75

Food: A few startups—and Starbucks—take the grab-and-go snack bar beyond bone-dry granola 78

Marketing: Frank Sinatra was buried with a flask of Jack Daniel's. Now it has his posthumous endorsement 79

Accessories: Spruce up your office outfit with statement stud earrings 80

The Critic: There aren't any product placements in Wes Anderson's films, but they still inspire good ads 82

What I Wear to Work: The intensely relaxed style of PR boss Dian Griesel 83

How Did I Get Here: From musician to music exec, Luke Wood's path to president of Beats Electronics 84

"We need the world, with lots of arrows pointing to the world's trouble spots, areas that cause concern for American foreign policy."

"So, off the top of my head: Venezuela, Ukraine, Syria, North Korea, Palestine, Israel, Congo, Iraq, Afghanistan. There are more, you know. A lot more."

"Could we just highlight areas of the world that aren't problematic for American foreign policy?"

"So just one big arrow pointing to moose people in Canada?"

"Don't joke about Canada or its mooses. Her frosty fortitude is a constant source of strength to me in these long days of winter."

"Yeah. Me, too. By the way—do you ever get the feeling that the world's problems never want to be solved and we're all just in a self-supporting cycle of persistent delusion, enabled by a narcissistic impulse to impose incompatible ideologies on our neighbors for a type of political gamesmanship that no one believes in anymore? Our leaders all acting under some imagined oppositional moral pretense when all..."

"Just design the cover."

"And make it look dumb."

