

Motorola's Mojo
From the DynaTAC 8000X
to the Droid X p72

Opening Remarks

7

Even the smart money is confused these days. Hedge funds, corporations, and households, are all hoarding piles of cash. What will help get markets moving? Higher corporate dividends.

Global Economics

11

The higher cost of bribery

Corporate payoffs are rampant in China, but a crackdown is increasing the risk of getting caught

Russia's oligarchs look to the next generation p12

Thailand: Empty beaches, busy factories p14

Another reason it's so hard to get fired in France p15

Tom Keene's EconoChat: MIT's Simon Johnson p16

Companies & Industries

19

From sand to snow

Egyptian billionaire Samih Sawiris brings his model of luxury resort development to Europe

Martha's carpet coup p20

Pfizer vs. pirates: "Civil" war p21

McDonald's goes ethnic p22

BP's dance with Abu Dhabi p24

In Brief p25

Charlie Rose talks with Areva's "Atomic Annie" p26

Politics & Policy

29

'Don't do anything stupid'

The Fannie and Freddie reform debate has begun. The early consensus: Moderate, not radical, fixes

Massachusetts' odd couple p30

A wireless health warning p31

Online help for navigating the health-care-reform maze p32

Hollywood loves Obama p33

Blagojevich in the dock p34

A spectacle
The icky Blago trial p34

Technology

37

Cracks in BlackBerry

Its smartphone is still king, but as its grip on corporate users loosens, RIM needs to up the wow factor

The FTC's privacy cop takes on social networks p39

CEO Bob Beauchamp on the secret to BMC's success p39

BestBuy is not amused by an employee's iPhone satire p40

Building a better bank p41

Markets & Finance

42

Championing Europe

France's queen of private equity, Axa's Dominique Senequier, is bullish on the Continent's prospects

GM may be worth more than Ford p44

Chávez cracks down on Venezuela's brokers p44

KKR prospects in oil and gas for its next big score p46

Bid & Ask: The week's deals p47

Trapped Crab fisherman Gerica has been forced into very crowded waters

Features

49

The Lost Summer

In the beach towns and bayous along the Gulf of Mexico's U.S. coastline, the hard times washed up even before the oil. A photographic portfolio p49

Henry Blodget's Road from Ruin

The former Merrill analyst, who left the industry in disgrace, bets what's left of his reputation on a business website that chases clicks p58

Attack of the Killer Ballot Proposition!

With Prop 14, political maverick Steve Peace is changing the way California—and perhaps the rest of the country—elects its leaders p64

Etc.

69

An Investment That Plays the Field

A new London-based hedge fund is making history by betting on sports. Americans, alas, won't be wagering

Hands On Its bigger screen and better network won't be enough to get Motorola's Droid X out from the iPhone's giant shadow p72

One True Thing A smart and savory snack to combat the late afternoon lag p73

A Free Day in Las Vegas Venture away from the Strip for a smaller, quirkier scene p74

Art Lehman's best investment, its contemporary art collection, heads for auction p76

Wealth Quant investor Rob Arnott hunts for unloved stocks in unloved markets p77

The Stack Charting Edgar Bronfman Jr.'s adventures in the music industry p78

Hard Choices Former Google exec Kai-Fu Lee gets behind Chinese startups p80