

Bloomberg Businessweek

Contents

Opening Remarks

8

Parts of Europe are close to pulling themselves together. They just need to move faster

Bloomberg View Trading: The need for less speed; two candidates, no tax plan p10

Global Economics

13

The Google indicator
Central banks are looking at search terms for up-to-the-minute reads on economic trends

Generation R, for renters p14
Pension trouble in China p15
Japan's risky bond boom p16
Shadows over solar in India p17
Tom Keene's EconoChat p17
Rose/King Abdullah II p20

Companies & Industries

23

Mainland markdown
China's economic slowdown has retailers slashing prices to lure newly cautious shoppers

GameStop without games p24
Campbell's gets fancy p25
Sanofi's U.S.-style makeover draws howls in France p26
Briefs: Fallout from Chevron's refinery fire p28

Politics & Policy

30

All in for Obamacare
Maryland and other blue states race to make the sprawling health-care law a reality

From Evil Empire to Pentagon arms supplier p32
Republicans maneuver to lock up early votes p33
The Obama stump speech: Then and now p34

Algorithmic
A money manager for geeks p38

Technology

37

The Facebook freakout
Investors' animosity toward the social network is just as irrational as their pre-IPO euphoria

Investments, unsullied by human hands p38
Teaching startups to protect ideas before building them p40
Software that helps find you—even underground p41

Markets & Finance

43

Smarter credit scores
As banks ease back into consumer loans, credit bureaus work to get a better read on borrowers

America's richest retirees don't mind rain p44
MIST, the new BRIC? p45
Japan's rinse-and-repeat financial scandals p46
Bid & Ask: Best Buy buyout? p47

The Interview Issue

Alan Greenspan
p64

Bob Iger
p82

Rahm Emanuel
p85

Kay Krill
p67

Dave Eggers
p70

Mitt Romney
p60

Kazuo Hirai
p98

Eric Holder
p80

Ellen Kullman
p94

Nouriel Roubini
p92

Brian Roberts
p76

And many, many more...