

It's a cinch
The cuff link as conversation piece p92

Opening Remarks

8

A whistleblower's charge that the SEC destroyed documents is the best argument yet to close it

Bloomberg View Where GOP naysayers err on climate change; in praise of Alan Krueger p10

Global Economics

13

Ethiopia: Trouble brewing
Its shift of coffee trading to a commodity exchange leaves a bitter taste for foreign artisanal buyers

Japan's PM revolving door p14
Can Britain reindustrialize? p15
Nebraskans vs. the pipeline p16
Tom Keene's EconoChat p17
Battling India's corruption p18
Seven days ahead p19

Companies & Industries

21

Change isn't Instamatic
In its race to revitalize digital, Kodak is burning up cash, selling patents, and trying to upgrade its image

Boeing's 787 is finally ready to fly—but not to make money p22
Exxon's deal with Rosneft caps a decade-plus effort by its CEO to expand in Russia p24
Briefs p25

Politics & Policy

26

Foreclosure Acres
The government is stuck with 248,000 homes, and it welcomes your ideas on how to unload them

Gunmakers hate the President? Not with these sales figures p28
What CEA nominee Krueger's writings reveal about him p29
CEOs' strange spin on taxes p30
Obama, the walking billboard p31

Technology

33

Patent problems pending
Dozens of lawsuits have swept through the mobile tech industry. Will social media stars get hit next?

More mpg for gas engines p35
The two odd programs easing the transition to the cloud p36
Mobile apps surge in India p38
Innovator: Daniel Gross's Greplin is one smart search engine p39

Markets & Finance

41

Off-the-wall credit ratings
S&P downgraded Treasury bonds, but it's high on subprime-backed securities. What gives?

AOL—yes, AOL—may be a hot private equity target p42
An impressive array of mansions up for auction p43
Carlyle courts Wall Street p45
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p46

Risk Management

51

The post-Katrina way
In disasters, Louisiana now relies more on business and less on government. FEMA is trying it, too

How do you insure the Arab Spring? Very carefully p52
The rise of weather trading p53
As cloud computing grows, so do concerns about security p54
Speed Dial: Michael Brown p56

Pullout section

Bloomberg Government Insider

In the coming era of Pentagon austerity, who will call the shots—generals or bean counters?

Features

58

The God Clause

Over the past 10 years, the reinsurance business has learned the new price of catastrophe p58

John F.W. Rogers: Speak Softly, and...

The Goldman Sachs partner keeps a low profile, but he could be the most important person there p68

Matthew Freud's Biggest PR Challenge

Elisabeth Murdoch's husband-adviser may emerge as a central force in the Murdoch empire p74

Etc.

85

Stanford on the Volga

There's just one problem with Skolkovo, a would-be Silicon Valley on Moscow's outskirts: It's in Russia

Perks At apparel maker Patagonia, surfing in the middle of the day isn't playing hooky, it's "working your flextime" p88
The One... Polaroid's GLiO Instant Mobile Printer creates souvenirs p90
Fashion With these cuff links, you'll never want to roll up your sleeves again p92
The Stack Mark Yarn's Everybody Loves Our Town, on how Seattle became the grunge capital of the world, is a must-read, if you can stand the puke jokes p94
Hard Choices Jeff Immelt took control of GE just before Sept. 11, 2001, and his first three months on the job shaped the company for the next 10 years p96