

Mornings after
The surest cure for
a hangover p63

February 11 — February 17, 2013
Bloomberg Businessweek

Opening Remarks

4

Falling birthrates and an aging global population may be what the world needs now

Bloomberg View An old, old law wreaks tax havoc; let the Pentagon handle drone strikes p6

Global Economics

9

Joblessness won't quit
Economists are hard-pressed to explain the unrelenting ranks of the long-term unemployed

Japan Inc. is investing in Southeast Asia p11
Collateral damage from cheap power in Brazil p12
Italy: Berlusconi vs. austerity p12
The week ahead p13

Companies & Industries

15

Fashion on fast-forward
With so many new styles rolling out, the industry puts a premium on speed—and workers get hurt

Aussie wine, from a bladder p17
Keeping lethal injection drugs out of prison p18
You may not want to put off buying that chocolate p19
Briefs: GM in China p20

Politics & Policy

22

Open—to a point
The Obama White House aims to be the most transparent ever. It has a long way to go

The really Affordable Care Act p24
Washington's war on hemp p24
Facebook goes to D.C. p25
Hillary teams up with tech p26
The business of breakfast p27

Parting gift
Clinton helps poor nations get online p26

Technology

28

Hackbusters

Chinese cyberattacks have helped turn security specialist Mandiant into a $100 million business

BlueStacks delivers Android apps to PCs and Macs p31
The new browser wars p32
Innovator: Ali Hajmuri gives smartphones X-ray eyes p33
Charlie Rose/Mike Moritz p34

Markets & Finance

36

Cash on the prairie

As local banks feast on North Dakota's fracking boom, developers and investors pour in

Insurers watch the weather p38
Frontier market funds thrive p39
The youngest billionaire p39
Justice's S&P suit could sink McGraw-Hill p40
Bid & Ask: Dell goes private p41

Hitmaker Sony Music's Morris has picked winners for decades p54

Features

42

Taking Control of Your Digital Self

Snapchat, a photo-sharing app created by two Stanford frat brothers, deletes pictures after a few seconds. It's not just a better way to flirt; it's a key to managing your identity on the Web p42

The Kids Decode the World

At a former shoe factory in Shenzhen, BGI's workforce of mostly twentysomethings is busy mapping the DNA of just about everything p48

The Music Man

At 74, Sony Music CEO Doug Morris dates back to 45s. He's also BFFs with Bono and Adele—and right at home in the age of Spotify and Pandora p54

Etc.

63

Hangover Over?

All you need, says Dr. Jack Dybis, is an IV bag of saline and vitamins. We tried it, and darned if it didn't work

Office Style Upgrade your workplace look a notch with these spiffy new belts p66
Social Studies The sins of Don Drapers everywhere—including mentioning Don Draper too much—come alive on a confessional website for ad execs p68
Rant Good news for new moms at work: Breast pumps are covered under Obamacare. Bad news: What's really needed, longer maternity leave, is nowhere in sight p69
Conspicuous Consumption Steven Soderbergh has long meditated on capitalism's good and bad sides, but Side Effects shows him unable to make up his mind p70
Hard Choices AMC's Charlie Collier on killing, then reviving, The Killing p72

COVER: PHOTOGRAPH BY CHARLIE ENGMAN; CASTING: MATTHEW WULF FOR WULF CASTING; HAIR/MAKEUP: TREVOR BOWDEN AT BERNSTEIN ANDRUILLI FOR MAKE UP FOR EVER.
THIS PAGE: FROM TOP: OJO IMAGES LTD/ALAMY; JASON NOCITO; MANDEL NGAN/AFP/GETTY IMAGES