

Bloomberg Businessweek

Contents

January 14 — January 20, 2013
Bloomberg Businessweek

Face Time
Beauty fashions for the workplace p70

Opening Remarks

6

In Tunisia, where the Arab Spring began, the transition to democracy is sputtering

Bloomberg View Coming clean on the Obama drone policy; more babel from Basel p8

Global Economics

10

Second-class citizens
The gang rape in New Delhi exposes widespread hostility to educated women

U.S. states and cities are spending again p12
Jack Lew's qualifications p13
Tom Keene's EconoChat p14
Missteps by Merkel p14
The week ahead p15

Companies & Industries

16

Willyloman.com
The salesman is being reborn on the Web using virtual pitches that lose the suitcases

AB InBev turns to the beer p17
Company cars help Germany's auto sales p18
A shipper asks Hong Kong to regulate pollution p20
Briefs: Smaller iPhones p21

FOB
Friend of business p22

Politics & Policy

22

Hillary, No. 1 in sales
Clinton has made the promotion of American business central to U.S. strategic interests

Why the NRA doesn't have to give an inch p26
Cut the pork, and Congress stops getting things done p26
Hollywood pets get a break p27
Congress by the numbers p28

Technology

30

Eyes on the tube
Huge TVs. Curved TVs. Amazing high-def TVs. The TV buzz at the Consumer Electronics Show

Groupon's CEO fights to keep his job p31
A star turn for comic geeks p32
Innovator: A master of mind control p34
Charlie Rose/Paul Jacobs p37

Markets & Finance

38

Goldman's secret
The bank's Multi-Strategy Investing unit sidesteps the Volcker Rule by avoiding short-term bets

Bill Ackman's quest to take down Herbalife p40
The new consumer finance watchdog finds its bark p41
How Obamacare plus the fiscal cliff deal will hit your tax bill p42

Pitching China Meg Whitman and Todd Bradley at HP's Shanghai expo p44

Features

44

Hewlett-Packard's Free Fall

The granddaddy of tech has lost 70 percent of its market value in two years. CEO Meg Whitman has a five-year plan to put the churning strategies and corporate intrigue to rest p44

The Dunbar Number

The guru of social networks is an Oxford primatologist with a theory about friends p52

How We Can Fix the Food Crisis

Four experts on the challenges food and agriculture producers face from climate change, an exploding population, and volatile markets p58

Etc.

67

Rejection Therapy: 100 Days of 'No'

Entrepreneur Jia Jiang inoculates himself against failure by failing all the time. And it's working

Office Style From pink cheeks to smoky eyes—this year's beauty trends applied to the workplace p70
Rant More media noise suggests flirting can help women get ahead at work. Give us a break p72
Spinoffs Yum, Arby's salads! A guide to thinner living at the drive-thru p73
The Stack The Org: The Underlying Logic of the Office comes to praise the modern-day corporation, not bury it p74
Hard Choices Director Michael Apted on filming 14 people's lives over 56 years p76