

New Threads
An alteration on
Savile Row p84

Opening Remarks

7

Osama bin Laden had lost relevance long before the raid in Abbottabad. Why? Al Qaeda's leader offered no relief to the poverty, oppression, and lack of opportunity that beset the Middle East

Global Economics

11

A Manufacturing Rebirth?

It's possible in the U.S., helped by a flexible workforce and rising wages in China

Where the jobs are	p12
Boot camp for U.S. workers	p13
A grim decade for America's factories	p14
Speed Dial: Snap-on's boss	p16
No longer made in the U.S.A.	p16
Seven days ahead	p17

Companies & Industries

19

Summer Movies

With ticket sales down this year, the heat is on Hollywood to score some home runs

China's yacht boom	p20
Vive la Tupperware	p21
Fuel surcharges take off	p23
Jobs for the Class of 2011	p23
Briefs	p24
Charlie Rose talks with Reed Hastings	p26

Politics & Policy

29

State Bidding Wars

To boost jobs, hard-up states are giving away $70 billion in annual subsidies to companies

Bachmann starts the wooing in early primary states	p30
The return of redlining	p31
States' Medicaid tally	p32
A new satellite space race	p33
The GOP's deficit disorder	p34

Netflix's Hastings
Streaming dreams p26

Technology

37

Game Changer

Electronic Arts is moving its popular console titles to Facebook and smartphones

Foxconn: The high cost of happy workers	p39
Turbulence in the online travel-booking industry	p40
Tracking hacking's rise	p42
Innovator: The point-and-translate app	p44

Markets & Finance

47

An Expensive Education

Jesse Glickenhau, scion of a Wall Street family, got a costly lesson on China and reverse mergers

Valuing polished diamonds	p48
Foreclosures visit Vegas's high-end neighborhoods	p49
Steering Norway's $570 billion investment fund	p50
A brainy hedge fund	p52
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p53

Service Champion A 164-second window to complete a Taco Bell order

Features

58

New Oriental Cracks the SAT Code

The Beijing test prep company is helping Chinese students ace U.S. college entrance exams p58

Fast and Furious at Taco Bell

Why the drive-thru is a supreme achievement in 21st century American manufacturing p64

Toyota Doubles Down

In an outsourced, post-tsunami world, Toyota says it's staying put in Japan. Is that a good thing? p70

Disaster Season

If extreme weather damages seem to be reaching an all-time high, it's because they are p60

Etc.

77

Everybody Loves Kostya

The wacky, thriving business of remaking cheesy American sitcoms abroad

The Navigator A trip through the maze of after-work drink options	p80
Sports Ping-Pong has gone from mildewy basements to chichi clubs to —alas— corporate shindigs	p82
Bespoke Norton & Sons puts a youthful face on Savile Row	p84
Spinoffs Sarah Palin dog wigs? Cashing in on the Mama Grizz biz	p85
The Stack In The Wizard of Lies , Diana B. Henriques offers a meticulously reported postmortem not only of Bernie Madoff's Ponzi scheme but of his entire career	p86
Hard Choices Frank McCourt on trying to hold on to the Dodgers	p88