

Where's the green?
With growth practically nil,
Ireland seeks capital p13

Opening Remarks

8

CEOs: Still overpaid after all these years. Proxy season is just the time to do something about it

Bloomberg View Simplify the Volcker Rule; a White House dodge on corporate taxes p10

Global Economics

13

Ireland goes for the gold

A dutifully austere economic policy isn't enough. The new gambit: Court foreign investment

So many long-term jobless p14

The leader on France's Left p16

Last call for the drachma p17

Tom Keene's EconoChat p17

The week ahead p18

Charlie Rose Q&A p20

Companies & Industries

23

Oh, Martha!

As Ms. Stewart inks an ample deal with J.C. Penney, longtime partner Macy's is far from pleased

Smuggled smokes in Spain p24

Audio expert Harman tries to beat back Beats p25

Can social media lift travel? p26

Nestlé's designer sweets p27

Briefs p28

Politics & Policy

30

Mandate love-hate

Republicans decry them as social engineering. But the party was for them before it was against them

Steve Judge: Meet the man who defends the 1% p32

Elbow room for chickens p33

Principals go back to school p34

Obama's Wall Street pals pull out their checkbooks p35

Technology

37

Google goes wide

Search is great, but Larry Page's hardware push shows an urge to be everything to everyone

The Valley gets NYC fever p38

Birchbox makes subscription services hot again p39

Inkling's e-book software p40

Kill switches come to PCs p41

Innovator: Angela Belcher p42

Markets & Finance

45

Merger lawsuit windfalls

Lawyers suing on behalf of shareholders often do well for themselves—even when their clients get zilch

Insurer Fidelity National plies the casual-dining trade p47

Toxic debt looks less toxic p48

John Pritzker: A Hyatt heir thinks small p49

Bid & Ask: The week's deals p50

Focus On Enterprise

53

Little screens' big trouble

As cineplexes go digital, smaller cinemas find they just can't afford the conversion costs

Kindstar finds a thriving market in China for blood work p54

Can the DIY "maker movement" put together a profit? p55

In GDP terms, small business is getting smaller p56

Loose Lips For challenging Olympus, Woodford was run out of Japan p68

Features

62

Download Interrupted

Kim Dotcom started Megaupload, made file-sharing explode, and now sits in a New Zealand jail, charged with conspiracy, racketeering, and more. A hacker supreme's ridiculous rise and fall p62

The Silencing of Michael Woodford

Olympus's ex-president and CEO dared to ask questions about what looked like fraudulent accounting—and paid dearly for it p68

Man vs. Fish

Asian carp are fast-breeding and highly destructive. As they ransack the Midwest and zero in on the Great Lakes, the race is on to stop them p76

Etc.

83

Would You Want to Know?

Genome sequencing is becoming affordable—which could lead to some very scary self-discovery

Networking How business cards survive in the age of LinkedIn p86

Words Why the Secret Service called JFK "Lancer," and other code-name peeks p88

Next Life After too much grunt work as a bank analyst, Charlie Chanaratsope discovered his true vocation: Selling affordable jewelry p89

The Stack Noam Scheiber's The Escape Artists argues that the Obama team fumbled the recovery—but, unlike Romney et al., it argues from the Left p90

Hard Choices Charlie Trotter loved being a Chicago restaurateur, but now he's ready to tackle ... Nietzsche, Dostoevsky, and God? p92