

Opening Remarks Investors shouldn't abandon emerging markets 8

Bloomberg View How a trade pact can save the rhinos • A wrongheaded tax proposal 10

Global Economics

Central bankers want to be masters of inflation, but they may not understand it 12

How scary is China's Sky Net? 14

Algeria tries to wring income from a huge black market 14

Investors are nervous as Canada's left-wing party gains strength 16

A new way to measure America's economic muscle 17

Companies/Industries

Health insurance startup Oscar isn't winning any awards yet 18

The search for the missing egg in Just Mayo 19

China's field trip to Hollywood 22

Briefs: Uber's uber labor problem; India is Google's latest headache 24

Politics/Policy

OSHA is still working on silica dust 27

Republican candidates have their own lab for testing tax plans 28

A college lobby with more than education at stake 29

Hit hard by bird flu, poultry farms ask Washington for insurance 30

A Bill: Fighting over school lunches 31

Technology

Cubans await the wired world 33

For $30, Americans snap up ZTE's phones 34

Lyft rethinks its road map 35

In India, it pays for store owners to promote online shopping 36

Innovation: Crystals to detect concussions 37

Markets/Finance

China assigns blame for its market meltdown 39

Press Control-F for fraud 40

Argentine motorists subsidize high oil prices 41

Bid/Ask: Warren Buffett gets into refining; On the Town gets a lift 42

Focus On/Manufacturing

Shoemakers in Portugal go upscale 45

Mexico holds up the trans-Pacific trade pact 46

China's latest 10-year industrial plan 47

The smartglove may have a hand on the assembly line 48

U.S. steelmakers lose against cheap imports 50

Features

Inside Trump World Like taking a long soak, or huffing new-car smell, or both 52

Swamp Thing Charif Souki's $20 billion bet on exporting natural gas from the U.S. 60

Finnish First A charitable EU is a dilemma for Finland's right-wing party 66

Etc.

Would you pay $22,000 for a perfect espresso shot? Then the Slayer is the machine for you 71

Accessories: Tuck your cash and cards into these luxurious unisex wallets 74

Entertainment: The smartest way to update a Hollywood classic is to change everything 75

Workspace: The best flower arrangements—and vases—for crowded desks 76

The Critic: Being a football agent sounds like glamorous work. A new show proves otherwise 78

What I Wear to Work: A Nashville ad exec avoids the country look 79

How Did I Get Here? Brooke Johnson discovered Regis, missed out on Oprah, and built the Food Network 80

1 "The cover is on Donald Trump. We spoke to him and his employees and got a firsthand look at the way he runs his organization."

"Do you think he'll agree to a shoot?"

"I don't think he's turned down a single magazine shoot, but I think we've been there already."

"Right, onward to the archives!"

2 "This is the Trumpiest one we could find."

"I don't doubt that."

3 "Minimal headline, maximum Trump."

"A bit too quiet, which is very not Trump."

4 "Maximum headline, medium Trump."

"No, that photo needs to be HUGE."

5 "Quote by Trump on top of Trump with headline about Trump."

"This is close, but something's still off."

"You're right. We need to channel Trump. Something that is unapologetically classy and attention-grabbing at the same time."

6 "Do you think people will get it?"

"Someone who thinks we're the only media outlet he's spoken to would probably read the story, too. Win-win!"