

Handling it
Hardworking attachés p78

April 1 — April 7, 2013
Bloomberg Businessweek

Opening Remarks

10

Bitcoin, the anarchist virtual currency, may just be the global economy's last safe haven

Bloomberg View What the EU must do in Cyprus; gay marriage and the power of public opinion p12

Global Economics

15

Stumped at the gas pump
Despite a U.S. oil boom, gas prices are still high—partly because refiners are boosting exports

Saudi land shortage p17
Is the Fed counting its money right? p18
The U.S. shadow economy p19
Tom Keene's EconoChat p19
The week ahead p20

Companies & Industries

23

The cost of cost-cutting
After trimming store staff, Walmart is having trouble stocking its shelves, angering customers

The rise of the wearable machines p24
China is lovely for L'Oréal p25
Sunset for the Sun's Page 3 girls? p26
Briefs: Dell's job insecurity p27

Politics & Policy

29

The Pac-Man sequester
Phil Gramm's efforts in the 1980s to force better budgeting may hold lessons for today

A break on student loans p30
Obama's green land grab p30
Rand Paul wooes Dad's fans p31
Chris Christie: Outearned by his wife and cool with it p32
A dim policy on headlights p33

Technology

35

All huffy at AOL
The company bet $315 million on Arianna Huffington's distinctive brand. Is it paying off?

China's Internet originators p36
Amazon's pilot season p37
DIY drones p38
Innovator: Adieu, passwords p39
Charlie Rose talks to Yahoo! teen tycoon Nick D'Aloisio p40

Markets & Finance

42

A $25 billion beating
Brazilian billionaire Eike Batista is having a very bad year as stocks in his companies slide

What M&A boom? p43
The troubling return of CDOs and their ilk p44
The crashing carbon market p46
Bid&Ask: Picasso's Le Rêve p47

Health Care

51

Prescription nannies
Companies are trying an array of high-tech solutions to get patients to take their meds

Obamacare scare: Double-digit premium hikes? p52
A Chinese startup takes aim at market leader Cochlear p53
Doubts about a promising Parkinson's treatment p54

Anti-Apple Samsung's Galaxy models now outsell iPhones p58

Features

58

The Samsung Era

How the South Korean conglomerate became the No. 1 smartphone maker—and its plans to stay on top

p58

Screwed in Cyprus

With the €10 billion bailout deal, Europe's leaders say they've averted yet another crisis. Cypriots on the street don't see it that way

p66

Fall Guy or Crook?

A Chinese functionary is charged with embezzling $14.5 million from the government. His story shows how insidious corruption is among low-level officials in China

p70

Etc.

75

YouTube, the Star Maker

A new breed of musical outliers is parlaying fame on the site into mainstream success

Fashion The brief on briefcases p78
FAQ Will sponsors like Tiger Woods more? Is Lindsey Vonn aware of his past? Everything you wanted to know about the new sports power couple p80
Branding What Lululemon's inadvertent transparency reveals p81
Conspicuous Consumption The HBO series Game of Thrones beats any business book at illuminating corporate power struggles p82
Hard Choices Michael Graves on ending his partnership with Target and following Ron Johnson to J.C. Penney p84