

Big noise

How to put 85 decibels in the palm of your hand p76

Opening Remarks

8

While Vladimir Putin will likely win the Mar. 4 election, his triumph may be short-lived

Bloomberg View Obama embraces super-PACs; The Fed needs to be bolder p12

Global Economics

15

What's helping housing
Short sales and other measures are proving to be more efficient than foreclosure proceedings

Italy chases luxury cars	p16
Unrest in Nigeria	p17
The high cost of love	p18
A U.S. negotiator in Greece	p19
Tom Keene's EconoChat	p20
The week ahead	p21

Companies & Industries

22

A lift from the third shift
As carmakers add overnight production, local businessmen and workers can sleep more easily

A diplomatic challenge for Airbus's straight-talking CEO	p24
China Garments' Italian line	p26
Old Milwaukee scores with its Super Bowl Hail Mary pass	p27
Briefs	p28

Politics & Policy

31

Regulations rule
Campaign rhetoric aside, new government regulations often create as many jobs as they "kill"

Fast U.S. visas for shoppers	p33
Google pings the Tea Party	p34
Will commercial drones fly?	p34
A new restaurant ranking	p35
Congress's do-nothing agenda for 2012	p36

Road show

Zuckerberg's path to the IPO p44

Technology

38

Zoosk is for lovers

The dating site wants to keep users coming back even after they've found a partner

Can Ireland's regulators stand up to the tech titans	p40
Sunny days for America's solar-panel installers	p41
Innovator: A musician turned online impresario	p42

Markets & Finance

44

Facebook IPO: T minus ...

The elaborate dance with regulators and investors has begun. We chart out the steps

Why ranchers are so ornery	p47
Private equity suffers from the Romney effect	p48
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p49
Charlie Rose talks to Prince Al-Waleed Bin Talal	p50

Top of the World Gazprom may end the Nenets' nomadic existence p56

Features

52

Dinner and a Scandal

Last May, Rupert Murdoch gathered his brain trust at his London home to plan a response to the phone-hacking debacle. What happened that evening still reverberates nine months later p52

Gazprom's Empire at the End of the Earth

The Russian giant has a lot riding on the success of a massive new gas field 250 miles above the Arctic Circle. So does Vladimir Putin and the Kremlin p56

Grounds Zero for Starbucks

Italy inspired Howard Schultz to build his caffeinated superpower. So why can't you get a frappuccino in Rome? Or Milan? Or anywhere in the country? p68

Etc.

73

Internet Pirates Find Religion

The Missionary Church of Kopimism holds file sharing sacred. What began as a joke is Sweden's newest church

The One... An overachieving compact wireless speaker for office DJs	p76
Macroeconomics The battle between Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul Krugman and his anti-Keynesian colleagues has lapsed into name-calling	p77
Office Envy Arts & Crafts site Etsy's HQ is like a nursery school built for grown-ups	p78
The Stack In The Conundrum , New Yorker writer David Owen catalogs the paradoxes of living green, including why driving a Prius may just make things worse	p82
Hard Choices Russian aluminum tycoon Oleg Deripaska on recovering from the financial crisis and a public upbraiding from Vladimir Putin	p84