

Bloomberg Businessweek

Contents

June 4 — June 10, 2012
Bloomberg Businessweek

He's so money
The enduring allure of Alexander Hamilton p67

Opening Remarks

4

Is biology to blame for Wall Street's most reckless behavior?

Bloomberg View America's out-of-work are resilient, but not endlessly so p6

Global Economics

8

China's funk

April's dismal economic indicators are prompting a new round of state spending

India: Olympic dreams	p10
Peru's pragmatic president	p11
Double trouble for Putin	p11
North Korea goes green	p12
EconoChat	p12
The week ahead	p14

Companies & Industries

17

Target's urban renewal

With cities growing faster than suburbs, the retailer has designed new stores for downtown shoppers

China Mobile fills the app void for Android	p18
After Dewey & LeBoeuf, its Lawyers v. Lawyers	p19
Old booze, new buzz	p20
Briefs	p22

Politics & Policy

24

Let's make a big deal

The U.S. and eight other nations race to complete the most ambitious free-trade agreement ever

A crumbling federal program
Washington won't talk about	p26
Stalking your friends' voting records	p27
Presidential ambitions can be harmful to your day job	p28

Surprise!
Humala is no Chávez p11

Euro slayer? Tsipras's message of defiance is resonating in Greece

Features

44

Radical Greek

Alexis Tsipras has become Greece's most potent political voice and the symbol of the austerity backlash. His rise could spell doom for the euro p44

Mother Nature Has a Hedge Fund

Under Goldman Sachs alum Mark Tercek, the Nature Conservancy's investments and partnerships are upending the green world p48

Back to Work

Bloomberg Businessweek follows 12 people as they return to the workplace after absences ranging from seven months to three and a half years p52

Etc.

67

The Foxiest Founder

Alexander Hamilton: federalist, father of U.S. finance, duelist, and a stud whose fan base keeps growing

Bespoke With its re-creation of suits from the first Bond film, 007's original Savile Row tailor gives your jacket room for a Beretta—or a BlackBerry	p70
Luxury Leave the Le Dix Origine phone at a bar, and you're out $312,000	p71
Office Envy A moving design for ad giant Saatchi & Saatchi's Bangkok office	p72
The Stack Edward Conard's over-the-top defense of wealth in Unintended Consequences may carry exactly that for his friend Mkt Romney's presidential hopes	p74
Hard Choices Newt Gingrich on his decision to relinquish the moral high ground in the wake of withering attacks in the heated Republican primaries	p76

Technology

31

Chegg switches majors

After nearly going broke, the textbook-rental site is remaking itself into a hub for academic life

AOL's bet on hyperlocal news has investors hyper-angry	p33
Cyberattack on Iran: A spy cloaked in code	p34
The model mathematician who helps Intel save millions	p35

Markets & Finance

37

The pain in Spain

Spain's banking crisis takes center stage in Europe as the country's real estate woes worsen

Complex ETFs can leave individual investors burned	p38
Saddling up subprime	p40
Foreign private equity firms lose ground in China	p42
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p43

COVER: BACK TO WORK (U.S.): CLOCKWISE FROM TOP RIGHT: BRIAN SORG; THOMAS PRIOR; CAITLIN TEAL PRICE; MARCELO GOMES; ROB BRULINSKI; LEONARD GRECO; GREGORY HALPERN. RADICAL GREEK (INTERNATIONAL): EIRINI VOURLIOMIS. THIS PAGE, FROM TOP: AGE FOTOSTOCK; EIRINI VOURLIOMIS; PAOLO AGUILAR/EFE/SIPA PRESS