

Puglist Chic
Bloody noses as a status symbol in Russia p69

Opening Remarks

4

Where's the economy heading? Hedge fund guru John Paulson is wildly bullish. Nobel economist Paul Krugman fears a third depression. The gods can reward only one of them

Global Economics

8

A new passage to India
Delhi's world-class airport terminal raises hopes the country can solve its infrastructure problems

| | |
|--|-----|
| Australia's mining boom divides Down Under | p10 |
| The Harvard economist who's taking on Keynes | p12 |
| Japan's bosses: Underpaid and loving it | p14 |
| Tom Keene's EconoChat: Ken Feinberg | p14 |

Companies & Industries

17

Rubbing off on Roche
Worries that a takeover would harm Genentech's culture fade as its dominant DNA spreads

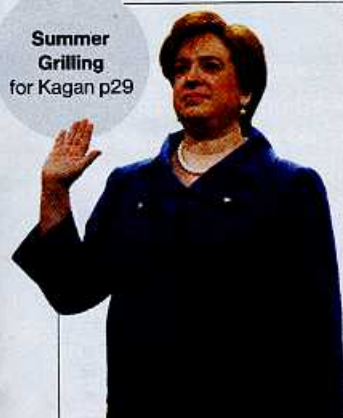

| | |
|---|-----|
| Emirates wins with big airplanes and low costs | p18 |
| Fiat has a lot riding on the redesigned Jeep Cherokee | p19 |
| Sony in the age of Apple | p20 |
| Landon Donovan is paid to play the bad guy in Mexico | p22 |
| In Brief | p22 |

Politics & Policy

24

Is BP a racketeer?
Private civil RICO suits against the oil giant could provide a road map for a future criminal case

| | |
|---|-----|
| Korean trade roadblocks | p26 |
| Robert C. Byrd, 1917-2010 | p27 |
| Princeton wants more money from Princeton | p28 |
| Pete Peterson's crusade | p29 |
| Did stimulus work? | p30 |

Summer Grilling
for Kagan p29

Technology

33

Business upgrades
IT spending is rising as companies make long-delayed purchases

| | |
|------------------------------|-----|
| China vs. online gamers | p34 |
| Bye-bye, unlimited data? | p34 |
| Tesla's boost for cleantech | p35 |
| From telecom to oil shale | p36 |
| Silence of the vuvuzela | p36 |
| Music downloads are down | p37 |
| .xxx isn't exciting everyone | p38 |
| Pandora's Westergren | p39 |

Markets & Finance

41

Spanish success story
Banco Santander is in an acquisitive mood despite its home country's troubles

| | |
|---|-----|
| Why Wall Street is happy with the financial reform bill | p42 |
| Oil plummets as weak demand trumps the Gulf spill | p43 |
| Hedge fund stars start grooming their successors | p44 |
| The paychecks get bigger as banks vie for talent | p45 |
| Bid & Ask: The week's deals | p46 |

Economist Esther Duflo A radical new approach to emerging nations

Features

48

How to Make an American Job

Former Intel CEO Andy Grove on why the country can't depend on startups to fire up employment. The secret, he says, lies in scaling up. Plus: Three U.S. companies trying to create factory work p48

Pragmatic Rebels of Economics

A new breed of poverty researcher is committed to testing for tangible results, eschewing economic ideologies in favor of getting things done p56

The Amazing Adventures of Tyler Brûlé

Ignoring digital trends, pondering hygienic airline headrests, the brand consultant and Monocle editor sets trends—and charges a premium p64

Etc.

69

Russia's Raging Bourgeoisie

The latest craze for status-obsessed Muscovites: Getting in the ring at exclusive boxing gyms

| | |
|---|-----|
| Hands On Online gaming gets "flirty"—or "dirty"—at GameCrush.com | p72 |
| Wealth Seizing opportunities in alternative energy stocks | p73 |
| Work Drug The world champion barista leading coffee's "third wave" | p74 |
| One True Thing A walk-to-work flat that's both comfortable and fashionable | p76 |
| Next Life A former pro player finds his footing selling old-school soccer T-shirts | p77 |
| The Stack How enlightened management might have saved the Beatles | p78 |
| Hard Choices Jeffrey Katzenberg on bouncing back after the most difficult decision of his career—leaving Disney—was made for him by Michael Eisner | p80 |