

The write stuff
The Lamy Dialog 3:
A glorious throwback p103

Opening Remarks

16

Goldman Sachs insists it has learned from the financial crisis. Don't you believe it p16

Bloomberg View Credit-default swaps work (see Greece); the Qube triggers privacy worries p18

Global Economics

21

The end of hukou?

China's registry system, which denies mobility to millions, has outlived its usefulness

Growth in the "sand states" p22

Iranians fight sanctions—with real estate p24

The odd race for Hong Kong's chief executive p26

Seven days ahead p28

Companies & Industries

31

Nike: Lighter on its feet

Its new sneaker, the Flyknit, is spun, not sewn—and could send jobs sprinting back to the U.S.

London taxis head to Azerbaijan p32

SABMiller tries African beer p33

Front-office outsourcing is reaching new shores p36

Briefs p38

Politics & Policy

41

Tariffs = jobs?

It's a philosophy that actually unites Congress, especially regarding China. But the evidence is murky

A White House hangover p42

Florida plaintiffs' way around damage limits: Lobbyists p43

Pepsi's sin tax p44

Obama's health-care reform goes to (high) court p45

Technology

47

Apple's app-oplexy

With 600,000 apps to police, the company has a hard time catching all the rule breakers

Austin Ventures rides the local tech wave p49

The lessons of SXSW p49

IBM, savior of the planet? p50

A glitch in NCAA betting p52

Innovator: Frances Arnold p54

Markets & Finance

57

Carlyle's payday

In advance of an IPO, the buyout firm borrows $500 million—to make a big payout to owners

Betting on bluefin in Japan p58

JPMorgan's fund coup p59

Acapulco real estate suffers p60

Argentina's Greek lesson p61

Bid&Ask p62

Rose/George Osborne p64

Focus On Energy

67

Solar rising in China

Panel prices are dropping, and sales are faltering abroad. Time to cultivate domestic growth

The jatrophia shrub looked like a renewable-energy cash crop. Why it didn't happen p68

While the rest of the industry bets on shale oil, SandRidge Energy's Tom Ward is investing in traditional crude p69

Ill wind Chinese turbines may run on stolen versions of U.S. software p76

Features

76

It's Not Paranoia If They Steal Your Secrets

Chinese corporate espionage is "the greatest transfer of wealth in history," says the U.S. National Security Agency's director. And growing evidence says China's intelligence agencies are involved p76

Jay Heinrich's Powers of Persuasion

A master of Aristotelian rhetoric, the corporate consultant is up to any job—even sharpening the creative edge at Ogilvy & Mather p86

Versailles West

David and Jackie Siegel's 90,000-square-foot Florida dream house, the ultimate in living large, spins a cautionary tale in recession economics p90

Etc.

99

From Smashing Pumpkins to Smashing Heads

Who knew rocker Billy Corgan was also an indie wrestling addict? Now he's a body-slam entrepreneur

History What Joseph Smith can teach Mitt Romney about running for president p102

The One... A fountain pen to grace the desk of the tasteful executive p103

Taste Test Gourmet dog chow is eating up more and more of the pet food market.

The cream of the canine crop, as sampled by human taste buds p104

The Stack Charles Duhigg's The Power of Habit zooms in on how routine behavior gets cultivated—and how to mine big profits from it p106

Hard Choices All four of Bill Marriott's kids work in the hospitality business. Why not one of them will succeed him p108