

Crate raiders Breaking the rules at music label Numero p90

Opening Remarks

6

The unfolding Bo scandal exposes fatal flaws
in the Communist Party p6

Bloomberg View: A glimmer of hope for the USPS; fighting terrorism with humility p10

Global Economics

13

A data-busting budget?
Proposed cuts could hamper the gathering
of economic statistics

Footwear tariffs pit Nike against
New Balance p14

Why so many companies in France have 49 employees p15

SpeedDial: Paul Krugman p16

The Philippines' hot hand p18

The week ahead p20

Companies & Industries

23

To OWN is expensive
Discovery may have lost more than $165 million on Oprah's TV venture

China's Tiger Moms have a growing appetite for SUVs p24

Oreos for overseas palates p25

Fracking is a flop outside the U.S. p26

India: A knockoff explosion p28

Briefs p30

Politics & Policy

33

Middle-class squeeze
New jobs are showing up at the high and low end of the market, leaving middle earners behind

Help wanted north of the U.S.-Mexico border p35

FEC: Toothless watchdog p36

ALEC's secrets revealed p37

Outlawed cupcakes p38

Charlie Rose/Tom Coburn p40

Markets & Finance

51

Phil Falcone's dream fades
As troubles mount at LightSquared, vultures like
Carl Icahn are circling

The confusing fine print in college loan packages p52

Estimize's consensus estimates are beating the Street's p54

Legal hurdles slow the flow of cash to Madoff victims p55

China's troubled IPOs p56

Bid & Ask: The week's deals p58

Technology

42

YouTube goes pro
Google's streaming service is investing $100 million in original programming

Baby monitor cameras that broadcast by accident p44

Hungry entrepreneurs p44

Why Google Drive doesn't scare startups p46

The new patent imperative p47

Innovator: Taking the pulse of a city's health p48

Reassessment Clay Christensen's changing priorities p64

Features

64

Tuesdays With Clayton

Harvard B-school prof and best-selling author Clay
Christensen's latest book tackles a new dilemma:
The rarity of professional and personal success p64

A Profitable Span

Matty Moroun's bridge from Detroit to Canada brings in $150,000 a day. No wonder he's fighting to keep his monopoly p70

Secrets of the Fold

From flowers to DNA, nature uses folding to make some of its most intricate creations. Can the same techniques reinvent manufacturing? p78

Etc.

85

Jock Air

Convicted stock swindler Al Palagonia is now a fast-talking jet broker with a pro athlete clientele

Next Life Two Irish brothers ditch their careers, move to Belize, and open a 17-room hotel p88

Perks Phone booths are making a comeback as quirky office décor p89

Branding How three record buffs who flout the rules of business turned their crate-digging skills into the profitable new music label Numero p90

Fashion For working women, style meets comfort in the season's best ballet shoes p92

Stack Eric Rutkow's American Canopy makes the case that trees shaped our culture—and traces the long-running feud between the harvesters and the huggers p94

Hard Choices Steve Case on heading back into the entrepreneurial "garage" p96

Aquino rising
The Philippines' economic surge p18

