

Strange Fruit
The pitaya is making its way to your refrigerator p79

Opening Remarks

12

Eleven years after Sept. 11, the U.S. is retreating from the Middle East. That may be a mistake

Bloomberg View Fixes for U.S. manufacturing; attacking inequality in South Africa p14

Global Economics

17

India's starving poor
Storehouses bulge with food, but corrupt politicians are keeping it out of reach

California's job growth outpaces Texas's p19
Putin vs. Soviet bondholders p19
Serbia's new old leaders p20
Tom Keene Q&A p21
The week ahead p22

Companies & Industries

24

P&G needs R&D
Procter's product engine has stalled. Can a new team of researchers and marketers recharge it?

Beachbody, creator of Paul Ryan's abs, is bulking up p26
All you need to know about those convention balloons p26
CBS: Youth isn't everything p28
Briefs: Meatless McDonald's p30

Politics & Policy

33

Karl's inner sanctum
At a super PAC meeting in Tampa, Rove waxes lyrical on his fondest dream: Taking the Senate

Romney says he'll kill Dodd-Frank. Don't bet on it p35
Fracking looked like a blessing to this Wyoming town, until... p35
Budgets that don't lie p36
Stargazing at conventions p39

Capitol Idea
What Rove really, really wants p33

Technology

41

Inside Billionaire's Row
"Incubator houses" for entrepreneurs sprout even in the better Bay Area neighborhoods

Apple's blogger of choice p42
Five products Apple would be better off without p43
Taking the e-book to Africa p44
Innovator: Ivan Poupyrev animates inanimate objects p45

Markets & Finance

47

Why banks can't break up
Stand-alone securities firms would lose cheap deposits and implicit federal backing

The DuPont deal returns Carlyle to its carve-out roots p49
The SEC wants cyberattacks brought out in the open p49
Barclays's quiet new leader p51
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p52

Old-school ways Davidson requires community service and on-campus living

Features

61

The Never-Ending Debt Story

With $1 trillion in student debt, it's no longer a given that college pays. Solving the problem requires a wholesale reexamination of higher education p61

Debt-Free Degrees

North Carolina's Davidson College has removed student loans from its financial aid package, with gratifying success. How replicable is its model? p70

The Fertilizer Baron of Manhattan

The madness that is New York real estate has an unlikely new leading man: Alex Rovi, a cigar-chomping Carpathian billionaire who prefers to pay in cash p72

Etc.

79

The Next Superfruit?

Eric Helms is counting on the pitaya to pick up where the pomegranate left off

Billionaires The Hong Kong brothers who re-created Noah's Ark, cubit by cubit p82
Bespoke Embee Sunshade: Sixty years of craftsmanship in handmade parasols p83
Lunch Hour Food containers that are compact, stylish, and don't have superheroes plastered all over them p84
The Stack Christopher Steiner's Automate This eyes the rise of algorithms—and registers alarm at how all-powerful they're becoming p86
Hard Choices Francis Ford Coppola still makes movies, but they're tiny and personal. Blame Hollywood's suffocating blockbuster mentality p88