

Time travel
An icon of the '80s goes electric p85

Opening Remarks

6

After years of huge profits, white-shoe law firms are falling on hard times. It's long overdue

Bloomberg View Raise the minimum wage; what Obama can—and can't—do about oil prices p8

Global Economics

11

Wanted: More Chinese

A group of local demographers is calling for an end to the country's one-child policy

French tech wants its due	p13
"Pastygate" in the U.K.	p14
Finland: Nokia withdrawal	p14
Tom Keene's EconoChat	p16
Argentina curbs imports	p16
The week ahead	p17

Companies & Industries

19

CNN's addiction

The granddaddy of cable news needs death and destruction to prosper

Trayvon Martin, the clicks	p20
McDonald's taste tests	p21
Betting on The Avengers	p22
Beermakers look to China	p24
London: Let there be light?	p25
Briefs	p26

Politics & Policy

29

Bowing out is hard to do

Think running a presidential campaign is difficult? Try shutting one down

Millionaires who dream of giving more to the IRS	p32
The drop in CO ₂ emissions	p33
Still-too-big-to-fail banks	p33
Obamacare may be just a click away	p34

Technology

36

Apple beware

Microsoft is trying to change its reputation for functional but unremarkable design

Yandex woos scientists	p38
A history of holography	p39
Ads for your office PC?	p39
Innovator: Putting solar cells on paper and fabric	p40
Rose/John Chambers	p41

Markets & Finance

42

Lazard's deity of debt

Michele Lamarche helps Greece and other countries win concessions from creditors

British investors find another way to lose in the market	p45
The oil-gas price gap	p46
Why bankrupt chipmaker Elpida is a hot takeover play	p46
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p47

Education

49

Keep them in, coach

Colleges look to executive-style coaches to prevent freshmen from dropping out

Buried in debt, and no degree to show for it	p50
The 30-year return on a college diploma	p51
California woos students from historically black schools	p52

Free marketeer Malek, in Cairo, was jailed under Mubarak's regime p68

Features

60

The SEC on the Loose

How the federal agency long derided as inept cracked the biggest insider trading case in history—and became the scourge of Wall Street in the process p60

Millionaires in the Mosque

The leaders of the Muslim Brotherhood are setting out to rebuild Egypt's economy, one businessman at a time p68

Welcome to Bubble U.

What happens when you run a college like a growth business? North Carolina's High Point University is finding out p74

Etc.

85

DeLorean's Density

The iconic sports car is back in a very limited, electric edition. (Sorry, no flux capacitor.)

Behavior What your congressman does when C-SPAN isn't watching	p88
Productivity People who sleep on the job may be gaining an edge	p90
The One ... A windbreaker that's attractive enough for spring weekend outings and tough enough to ward off a sudden chill	p92
The Stack In Why Nations Fail , Daron Acemoglu and James Robinson describe the critical junctures that led to creative destruction—or just destruction	p94
Hard Choices Dave Goldberg, CEO of SurveyMonkey (and husband of Facebook COO Sheryl Sandberg), on the importance of family in a two-career family	p96