

99 Percent Chic
Zuccotti-spawned
tchotchkes p104

Opening Remarks

10

Washington fails yet again to reduce the deficit.
This time only one party bears the blame

Bloomberg View An election priority for Egypt's generals; in defense of the GAO p12

Global Economics

15

China's super-rich exodus
Education for the kids,
clean air, and rule of law
are luring wealthy families
to emigrate

Samoa: A step forward for trade,
a step back for health p16
Irish stoicism amid austerity p18
A cautionary Kazakh tale p21
Tom Keene's EconoChat p22
Seven days ahead p23

Companies & Industries

25

House proud Grocery chains are boosting their private-label
lines as hard times weaken
shoppers' brand loyalty

China: Who's going to stay in all those sleek new hotels? p26 Oil tanker giant Frontline may run aground p27
Adidas's shoe-with-a-chip p28
Briefs p31

Politics & Policy

33

Strength in second place
Mitt Romney is stuck at 25 percent in the polls.
Which is just where he wants to be

Alabama rethinks its tough
immigration law p34
A bullet train to Vegas p36
The debate over rearview
cameras p39
Newt Inc. p40

Technology

43

Game fatigue Zynga and other social game developers are finding it harder—and more expensive—to create hits

Decoding rap lyrics for the masses p45
Amazon's UPS alternative p46 EBay flirts with real-world retailing p46
Innovator: Google for barks p48

Markets & Finance

51

Getting a free pass?
Ratings companies helped precipitate the financial crisis. But the regulatory backlash has been mild

Can granny solve the housing crisis? p52
Banks are financing buyers of their soured loans p53
A big threat to Spain's banks p54
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p56

Focus On Sustainability

59

How green thou art
Companies are buried in requests for data as groups vie to be arbiters
of eco-correctness

The team that's helping Wal-Mart become green p60 Rebuilding quake zones with the next disaster in mind p61
From Ikea, a paper challenge to the wooden pallet p64

Gym rats Gatorade's lab in Bradenton, Fla. p84

Features

67

Global Security Geeks

The world may be safer, thanks to the wizards at Palantir, a Silicon Valley data-mining startup p67

The Gloucester Fish War

How a small town in Massachusetts destroyed a decade of law enforcement p76

Gatorade Is Not a Beverage Company

To rejuvenate the brand, PepsiCo is returning to athletes—and feeding them, too p84

The People vs. Private Equity

Steven LeBlanc and other pension managers are pushing buyout firms for concessions. Finally p90

Etc.

101

Project Fairway

Dan McLaughlin had never hit a golf ball when he read Outliers. Now he has 10,000 hours to turn pro

Spinoffs Occupy the checkout line: A populist movement's consumerist trappings p104
Next Life At GiveWell, two hedge fund alums apply hedge fund rigor to charities p106
Car Spies Detroit's masters of disguise p108
Fashion The season's best scarves, in order of audacity p112
The Stack James Livingston's Against Thrift argues that the cure for the nation's malaise is for consumers to spend more—a lot more p114 Hard Choices Billy Hunter, the former head of the NBA's defunct players association, relates the intractable negotiations that drove the union to dissolve itself p116