

We all scream for iPods
What's in this year's updates to Apple's lineup p76

Opening Remarks

7

As Nokia loses relevance in the smartphone era, here's what we can learn from its fall: For players in fast-changing markets, complacency and geographic isolation are killers

Global Economics

11

Basel III: Safer banks?

The new rules are tough—so tough that institutions will be given up to 13 years to fully comply

- Dengue fever stalks India's upper and middle class p13
- Surprising support for conservatives in Sweden p14
- Japan's currency move p16
- Britain's deficit-shrinking budget thrills bond buyers p17
- Seven days ahead p19

Companies & Industries

21

Cable's Netflix nightmare

Fast growth and pricey deals have made the video service the first Web-based movie channel

- WNBA team owners make history, not profits p22
- Crowdsourcer Threadless has moved beyond T-shirts p24
- For millions of Indians, Pepsi is The Real Thing p26
- Goo-goo Gucci. And Dior p27
- Briefs p28

Politics & Policy

31

Tea Party power broker

First-term Republican Senator Jim DeMint is now a kingmaker, racking up wins for underdogs

- Elizabeth Warren: watchdog-in-waiting p32
- Weighing the Bush tax cuts p33
- Obama's blue-collar hero p34
- Budget blues in Chicago p36
- Charlie Rose: Paul Ryan p38

Protector

A new role for Warren? p32

Technology

41

And now, the 4G toaster

As mobile growth slows, Verizon is looking to bring nontraditional devices into its new network

- Samsung's point-and-shoot plan to compete with Apple p42
- High-quality research on high-tech startups p43
- Smart meters meet some stiff resistance p44
- Putting microchips in prescription pills p45

Markets & Finance

47

Is this a buy signal?

Individual investors have lost faith in stocks. That may be a sign of a rally just ahead

- Lehman's bankruptcy drags on—and that's a good thing p48
- Nigeria's new oil minister—an ex-Shell exec—is under fire p49
- Wall Street is still keeping investors in the dark p50
- Bank mergers are coming p51
- Bid & Ask: The week's deals p52

Tiny bubbles Can the resilient Pabst brand survive its new owners? p62

Features

54

Get Us Out of This Mess!

Bloomberg Businessweek gave four top economists and one prominent money manager a tough assignment: Fix the U.S. economy p54

Keeping Pabst Blue Ribbon Cool

For the jet-setting, billionaire owners of the spontaneously hip, old school beer, the hardest job may be leaving the brand alone p62

Who You Calling "Wife of ...?"

Lisa Falcone, the outspoken wife of Harbinger Capital founder Phil Falcone, is using $5 million in seed money to make movies and prove that she's more than a hedge fund honey p68

Etc.

73

The End of the Office Affair

A wave of discrimination claims, many by those not directly involved, threatens the workplace romance

- Hands On It's fall, and—since 2003—that means it's time for Apple to roll out its redesigned iPods. A look at this year's crop p76
- Wealth The hidden value in multinational blue-chip stocks p78
- Next Life Leaving the Street to launch an off-road adventure business in Nevada p79
- Food At McCormick, Kevan Vetter's Flavor Forecast predicts what will please American palates in the year ahead—and adds spice to the company's sales p80
- The Stack Can studying centuries of Ponzi crooks avert the next financial disaster? p82
- Hard Choices Wipro's Azim Premji on dropping out of Stanford, building his company, and finally finishing his engineering degree p84