

Fantasy football
A league whose players risk "accidental nudity" p91

Opening Remarks

10

Retailers depend on holiday shoppers going a little crazy. This year consumers' skittishness may help them retain some self-control. While that won't please the stores, it is good for the economy

Global Economics

15

The big squeeze

Companies like Campbell's are boosting efficiency, making it less likely they'll need to hire new workers

India revives an old plan to promote new growth	p16
Here come Chinese jets	p17
Ireland clings to low taxes	p19
A royal wedding dividend?	p19
Tom Keene's EconoChat	p19
Seven days ahead	p20

Companies & Industries

23

Kia raps past a bad rep

Low prices and edgy ads are helping more drivers ignore the Korean carmaker's quality ratings

Merck's high-risk cholesterol drug bet may pay off	p24
Warner Bros. tries to conjure up the next Harry Potter	p25
Toys from luxury carmakers	p26
Sweets for those who tweet	p28
Briefs	p29

Politics & Policy

31

Starstruck no more

Some cash-strapped states are ending tax incentives meant to lure Hollywood productions

Congress: Here come the climate change skeptics	p33
Treasury's GM dealmakers	p34
The TSA's security dilemma	p35
Should currency derivatives get a pass on regulation?	p36

Technology

39

Amazon's prime mover

Prime, Amazon's two-day shipping program, has boosted loyalty and sales. Now rivals are copying it

A materialist's dream site	p41
How Google woos entrepreneurs	p42
The secretive giant that ate an industry's profits	p44
Personalizing the Web	p46

Markets & Finance

49

The IPO door is ajar

Private equity firms are finding a market for shares in quality companies that aren't mired in debt

Bank dividends may be back	p50
Falcone's fundraising plan	p51
Rose Q&A: Steven Rattner	p52
A windfall for GM creditors	p54
Fewer worries for the dollar	p55
Stocks over junk bonds	p55
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p56

Climate Change

59

Cancún forecast

U.N. climate negotiations are bogged, but there is a way to unlock private funding for green projects

A stinking mess in Texas	p60
Unlikely allies in the war against carbon	p61
Carbon traders look for other lines of work	p64
Schwarzenegger's "schnitzel strategy" for clean energy	p65

The wire A detective looks for stolen copper in Dallas

Features

66

The Copper Cops

Thieves are tearing up the country's infrastructure to get at its valuable copper. Dallas' metal theft squad is showing other cities how to stop them p66

Revenge of the Mad Men

Everyone is waiting for the Big Four ad giants to fade away. It turns out the behemoths are adapting and may soon devour those Internet upstarts p74

The Unknown Guru

CEO coach Stephen Miles, just 43, has quietly built a client list that includes some of the biggest names in business. What makes him so good? p82

Etc.

91

Putting Some Skin in the Game

The Lingerie Football League is a rarity in sports—a women's professional league that's actually growing

Fashion An international playboy turns his attention to dressing "Rich. Old. Men."	p94
Hands On A gadget built for the TV-Web geeks who can figure out how to use it	p96
Perks For employees at Nike's Beaverton campus, scheduling a workday around a workout is no problem	p98
Wealth James Moffett's long-term strategy for Scout International Fund	p100
The Stack The secret of the economic meltdown, according to Bethany McLean and Joe Nocera: Bright people can do some pretty dumb things	p102
Hard Choices Macy's Terry Lundgren on uniting his stores under one name	p104