

Haggling 101
Figure out what
you're worth p98

Opening Remarks

14

The heavy-handed U.S. approach to airport security is making Americans less safe

Bloomberg View It's time for the EU to slim down; states should move on health exchanges p16

Global Economics

19

The battle for Korea
Its presidential candidates are vowing to curb the chaebol, which account for almost half of GDP

The man with a plan to revive China's growth p21
France's alarming decline p22
Tom Keene's EconoChat p24
The fun deficit in Singapore p24
The week ahead p26

Companies & Industries

29

Who's the real boss?
At companies such as Yahoo! and WellPoint, big investors are throwing their weight around

Happy hour for Jim Beam in Russia p30
Baccarat's mass appeal p31
Making cancer care affordable in China p32
Briefs: HP's buyer's remorse p34

Politics & Policy

37

They want what he's got
Corporations woo the tech team that helped Obama win a second term

The high cost of underpaying doctors p39
It pays to be a provost p40
BP's $4.5 billion mea culpa may not be enough p42
Rose/Jon Huntsman p44

Technology

47

Happy fifth, Kindle
Amazon's e-reader transformed the market. Next, Jeff Bezos wants it to conquer digital media

Will Internet registry Donuts be a cybersquatter magnet? p49
Hackathons spread beyond Silicon Valley p50
Innovator: You can't keep Daniel Kim's motorbike down p51

Markets & Finance

53

Insider-trading epidemic
The health-care industry is rife with illegal sharing of confidential information

The alternative banking universe p55
Busy in-house M&A teams p56
A Swiss battle over taxing the super rich p57
Bid&Ask: Chaplin's threads p58

Focus on Energy

61

Green strategy, red ink
Many of China's cleantech companies are in trouble. Why Beijing should allow the industry to consolidate

Norway: Coveting its neighbors' CO<sub>2</sub> p62
Handicapping energy sectors under Obama p63
The bright outlook for U.S. drilling p64

Formaldehyde art Damien Hirst's False Idol p78

Features

66

The Unretiring Mr. Welch

A decade removed from GE, Jack Welch has built his brand, becoming a pundit, a social media star, and a speaker who commands six figures p66

Why Can't India Feed Its People?

Many in the country still subsist on fewer than 1,700 calories a day. Visiting his father's village, the writer learns what it's like to eat as many poor Indians do p72

Jumping the Shark

Damien Hirst tampered with art market economics in 2008 when he auctioned $200 million of his work directly to bidders. Now his stock's crashed p78

Etc.

93

Workplace Bully Beatdown

Persecuted professionals are battling back. But do offices, like grade schools, really need a no-bully zone?

Counter Intelligence Whole Foods has its shopping experience down to a science. Here's how it pushes your buttons p96

Compensation When haggling over salary, it's all about the first number on the table p98

Tech Support Some companies are banning the dangerous "Reply All" option p100

Conspicuous Consumption Brad Pitt: Death becomes him in Killing Them Softly

Plus Heads in Beds hotel tales, a whistle-blower's Exposure, new biz books in haiku p102

Hard Choices Hostess Brands' Gregory Rayburn on the dimming of Twinkies p104