

Bathroom Break
Bringing the office john into
the 21st century p83

Opening Remarks

12

Cheap solar power is here, but without a smarter energy policy, the U.S. won't see the benefits

Bloomberg View Why a Medicare price cap threatens drug safety; U.S. immigration idiocy p14

Global Economics

17

The schizoid economy
U.S. consumers are giddily spending while businesses are fretting and tightening up

Scaring Indians safe p18
Undoing Mubarak's deals p19
Decoding China's slogans p20
Tom Keene's EconoChat p22
Selling "Made in France" p22
The week ahead p23

Companies & Industries

25

Director diversity
Everyone agrees boards are overwhelmingly male. But there's a gender gap over how to change that

Indian outsourcers seek a passage to America p26
Newsweek's digital dreams p27
Rise of the robo-mower p28
Briefs: Finally, some good news for Facebook p30

Politics & Policy

33

All policy is local
Age-old distinctions between domestic and foreign policy no longer make sense

A rogue union boss takes on Obama p34
Mugged by the Mungers p35
Crime pays for telcos p37
The billionaire and his anti-Obama tear-jerker p38

Technology

41

Microsoft's makeover
It's not just rolling out the Surface tablet and Windows 8 but also a new vision for the company

An ad-free social network—for a fee p42
E-books may finally get some traction in Japan p44
Eco-friendly bottles inspired by iPhone packaging p45

Markets & Finance

46

Banking on AmEx
The new Bluebird debit card may be its gateway into banking's next frontier, digital finance

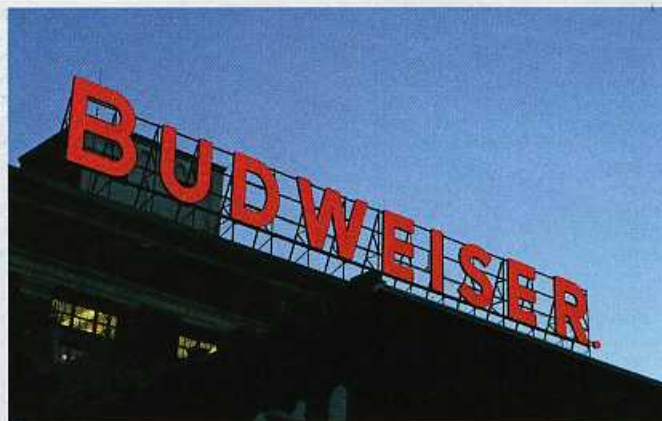

Warren Buffett's rising star p48
U.S. stocks beat rivals p50
An emaciated Texas utility and the dealmakers dining off it p50
Bid & Ask: Rosneft expands p51
Rose/Jeremy Grantham p52

Enterprise

55

Saving men from malls
Websites are taking the pain out of shopping, and online menswear sales are growing fast

An e-market for teachers p56
Matchmakers for small businesses and banks p57
A roadblock for immigrant entrepreneurs p58
Elder care that clicks p60

Iconic The "King of Beers" is getting watered down

Features

64

The Plot to Destroy Beer

Under Carlos Brito, AB InBev has acquired its way to global dominance. One hitch: The skilled financial engineer has trouble selling beer in America p64

The Pinstriping of Tim Pawlenty

As a presidential candidate, the former Minnesota governor's message to bankers was, "Get your snouts out of the trough." Now he's working for Wall Street p72

Dude, Where's My Yacht?

The repo men of International Recovery Group stealthily relieve wealthy debtors of boats, jets, and all sorts of toys p76

Etc.

83

Why Do Office Bathrooms Stink?

From open floor plans to in-house cafes, workplace design has come a long way. Until you hit the head ...

Personal Business Five designers imagine their dream office bathrooms, including the Greenhouse, with natural light for plants, showers, and rest areas p86

Productivity With as much as $1 trillion lost yearly to office distractions, productivity experts abound. A writer goes in search of lost time using some of their techniques p88

The Stack In his bitter goodbye, Why I Left Goldman Sachs, Greg Smith discovers the truth: You are what you earn, and the client will never matter more than that p90

Hard Choices A Gawker writer talks about Internet anonymity and the limits of free speech p92