

Opening Remarks The future of U.S. cloud companies may be on the line in federal court 8

Bloomberg View Remember smog? Seems the EPA doesn't • A costly tax proposal in Europe 10

Global Economics

The Trans-Pacific Partnership comes at a time of slipping world trade growth 12

State and local governments loosen the purse strings—and boost U.S. GDP 13

As dam projects in Asia multiply, so do protests by people soon to be flooded out of their homes 14

Harsh words from Beijing for billionaire Li Ka-shing send shivers through Hong Kong's elite 16

Charlie Rose talks to former Fed chief Ben Bernanke 18

Companies/Industries

Burned by flaming water skis? There's now an insurance reimbursement code for that 20

The pull of pulled pork 22

Hamilton's rising tide lifts other Broadway shows 23

The feds, investors, and plaintiffs' lawyers line up to take Volkswagen to court 23

Briefs: A fantasy sports nightmare; this Bud bid is not for SABMiller 24

Politics/Policy

Wherever you go, there campaign ads are 26

Cockpit video may soon be required on aircraft, whether pilots like it or not 27

An old friend of Joe Biden's sues Treasury 28

How Chicken of the Sea helped raise the minimum wage in American Samoa 29

Technology

For smartphone makers not named Apple, profits are thinner than their products. Why bother? 33

Reports of the death of Canadian tech are greatly exaggerated 34

Startups finally join Amazon, Google, and Microsoft in the cloud 35

France's Atos says no to e-mail 36

Innovation: Prosthetics that give amputees the sense of touch 37

Markets/Personal Finance

Nervous investors aren't likely to get a break in October 39

Silicon Valley startup Motif pushes portfolios with a theme 40

Looking for commitment? You might want to check your date's credit score 41

Value investors' long-term strategy is producing some short-term pain 42

Retirement: TIAA-CREF CEO Roger Ferguson on why a low-cost annuity is better than a 401(k) 44

Focus On/Health Care

Sean Parker's $24 million fight to cure food allergies 47

High cancer drug prices in China create a lucrative under-the-counter market in Hong Kong 48

A vaccine against a killer bacterium could be a blockbuster for Pfizer 49

If a drug doesn't work, why should we pay for it? 50

Features

Beltway Honey Badger Crush Clinton? Bash Bush? Sure. Breitbart's Steve Bannon don't care 52

Million-Dollar Babies How two guys from Brooklyn lost God and got rich 60

Only Human Stanford's top-ranked B-school has a management problem 66

Etc.

There's more on TV than ever. That's good for Paul Reiser—and lots of other semi-retired actors 71

Fashion: It's kitten heels vs. chunky heels in this fall's battle for women's feet 74

The Critic: With Lenny, Lena Dunham goes from the small screen to your inbox 76

Networking: A flow chart to help you walk into a room and handle any stressful situation 77

Drinks: After 25 years of prohibition, happy hours are here again in Chicago 78

What I Wear to Work: The corporate gypsy look of the National Geographic Society's Melina Gerosa Bellows 79

How Did I Get Here? Dr. Rodney Perkins needs a list to keep track of all the companies he's started 80

1 "Cover is on Steve Bannon. He runs a right-wing website and is making a successful career of taking down politicians."

"How does he do that?"

"One way is that he's effective at distributing his message through other news outlets."

"Interesting! I look forward to reading about all his points of view in our magazine with an open and easily influenced mind."

"Yes. We all shall. We shall certainly all read everything Steve Bannon has to say in our magazine."

"So where did we shoot him? At his house?"

2 "Looks like all my family portraits."

"I'm sure. Also, this is mostly just about Bannon."

3 "This still feels like it's maybe 50 percent about Bannon. It's mostly about Bannon."

