

Mon-ey!
Chipmunks
are forever p89

Opening Remarks

12

In an exclusive interview, Larry Page reflects on the trials of his first year as CEO of Google

Bloomberg View Too much bank oversight is better than none; moving Myanmar forward p16

Global Economics

19

Off the books in Pakistan
Much of the country's economy is underground, leaving the government starved for revenue

"Made in China" now means high-end machinery p21
U.S. shoppers are buoying the world's exporters p22
Unscrambling the euro p23
Seven days ahead p24

Companies & Industries

27

The JetBlues
It's too small to compete with its rivals, and customers aren't feeling the love anymore

Daimler bets on Hungary p29
Sports broadcasters start to feel the pinch p30
Will Rupert Murdoch get another shot at BSkyB? p32
Briefs p24

Politics & Policy

37

Beyond the mandate
How Obamacare can live even if the Supreme Court kills the individual mandate

The Chinese try to harness the Nevada sun p38
Real life 101: Debt collectors want your money p39
Feed the poor? Not here p40
Charlie Rose/Nancy Pelosi p42

Technology

45

From space to startup
As NASA struggles, former contractors and employees are becoming tech entrepreneurs

Pair, the social network built for two p47
HTC pins its hopes on Dr. Dre and video games p48
Innovator: Learning from fish to build better wind farms p50

Markets & Finance

53

No Goldman touch
Some traders who left to start hedge funds aren't making money for investors

The private prison bust bruises muni investors p54
China: Land of opportunity for auto insurers p55
European tech ♥ the U.S. p56
Bid & Ask: The week's deals p57

Enterprise

59

Is lithium the answer?
PolyPlus's batteries could power cars and gizmos of all sorts—if they can be adequately recharged

Letterpresses go back centuries. Why are they so popular in an iPad age? p60
More small companies are dropping traditional health plans and self-insuring p61

Fear, loathing, and the IRS The U.S. tax code is not a thing of beauty

Features

68

The People vs. the IRS

For frustrated taxpayers, the national tax advocate is the defender of last resort p68

Adventures in Tax Preparation

Using his own returns, Joel Stein puts four accountants to a highly unscientific test p74

Into RIM's Ring of Fire

Saving the company sounds like mission impossible. Thorsten Heins says he can do it p78

Making the Magic 3-Wood

A crisis in golf? Tell that to the folks at TaylorMade, makers of the game's hottest clubs p84

Etc.

89

Alvin and the Profits

All right, you globe-trotting pop star chipmunks: Ready to make another billion or two?

Hall of Fame Great moments in office pranks p92
Canada RIM may be down, but Waterloo isn't out p94
Networking The six breeds of successful salesmen p96
The One ... A lowball glass for a high-toned office p97
The Stack In Inequality and Instability, James K. Galbraith sees capitalism's vaunted creative destruction as merely destruction p98
Hard Choices Joe Jimenez, CEO of Swiss pharmaceutical giant Novartis, on the decision to lay off employees in good times p100