

Bloomberg Businessweek

Contents

April 16 — April 22, 2012
Bloomberg Businessweek

Run a board meeting by Fred Wilson p87
Build a Web following by Alexis Ohanian p72

Opening Remarks

Best Buy isn't the only big box brought low by mobile technology

Bloomberg View The Obama and Ryan budgets aren't as far apart as you think p8

Global Economics

11

Railing against rail

A high-speed train project in the Italian Alps sparks a national protest movement

Making the case for manufacturing in the U.S.	p12
China vs. the Web	p13
Home bidding wars redux	p14
Tom Keene's EconoChat	p15
The week ahead	p16

Companies & Industries

18

Slimed

The Web campaign against "pink slime" went viral—and burned beef processor BPI

Pay-per-view wrestles with bar owners	p21
Hugo Boss targets China	p22
Air-freighting animals: A most lucrative game	p23
Briefs	p24

Politics & Policy

27

Romney's quest

He'll almost certainly be the nominee. Now he has to convince Republicans he isn't a lost cause

Freeing your cell phone from African warlords	p28
The man who's setting information loose	p30
What the rich really pay	p31
Charlie Rose/Paul Ryan	p32

Technology

35

Berlin's boom

With startups proliferating, risk-averse German financiers put money into a nascent tech hub

The rise of the e-jukebox	p36
Startups can't ignore D.C.	p37
Apple delays, hackers play	p38
A billion-dollar snapshot	p39
Innovator: Ren Ng focuses on reinventing photos	p40

Markets & Finance

43

The Apple whisperer

Analyst Gene Munster says the company's shares will hit $1,000. He hasn't been wrong yet

The building boom that's sinking Stockton, Calif.	p45
Milwaukee, fund Mecca?	p46
A death sentence puts shadow banking on trial	p46
Bid & Ask: The week's deals	p50

China Scandal

A dramatic fall and censors in overdrive p13

