COVER

With her mother looking on, a woman in Hlabisa, South Africa, receives an HIV test as part of a survey by the Africa Centre for Health and Population Studies. In this issue, two Reports (pages 961 and 966) show that treating HIV-infected people reduces the risk of virus spread and increases life expectancy. A special News section (page 898) describes South Africa's fight against the co-epidemics of HIV and tuberculosis.
