THIS WEEK

EDITORIALS

273 NEUROSCIENCE

What lies beneath

The shift towards biological targets in psychiatric conditions is welcome

273 GENOMICS

How to get ahead

Realistic goals can inspire rapid innovation

274 HISTORY

Past wisdom

The Nature Pastcast offers some historical tips for future generations

WORLD VIEW

275 Fraudbuster with political antennae required

Colin Macilwain

David Wright's resignation raises tough questions for the US Office of Research Integrity

RESEARCH HIGHLIGHTS

276 SELECTIONS FROM THE SCIENTIFIC LITERATURE

Orange makes you think / High-mileage badgers / Overheated crops / Nanotubes boost leaves / Nanoprinting in 3D / Out of Africa by mistake / More warming in Greenland

SEVEN DAYS

278 THE NEWS IN BRIEF

Illegal fires ravage Sumatra / Asian carp head north in the US / Gulf War illness eludes definition / Europe bans HFCs

CAREERS

389 RETRACTIONS

A clean slate

When things go wrong, it pays to act promptly to set the record straight

391 COLUMN

Strapped students

Susie Crowe

With postgraduate education so costly, prospective students need to think long and hard about whether it's for them

NATUREJOBS ADVERTISING FEATURE

Spotlight on postdoctoral positions

NEWS IN FOCUS

281 COSMOLOGY

Antarctic telescope spies evidence of gravitational waves

283 REGENERATIVE MEDICINE

Pressure mounts over methodology in acid-bath stem-cell papers

285 POLICY

France Córdova takes the helm at the National Science Foundation

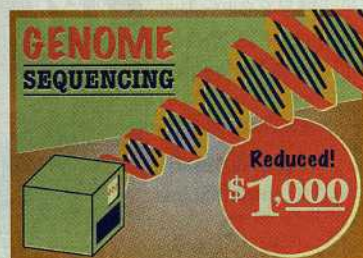

286 ECOLOGY

Water set to return to Colorado River delta

288 POLICY

NIH takes fresh tack on psychiatry trials

FEATURES

TECHNOLOGY

The $1,000 genome

A unique US programme has pushed the cost of sequencing ever lower

PAGE 294

290 NEUROSCIENCE

Tuning the brain

Researchers are harnessing deep brain stimulation to investigate problem neural circuits

COMMENT

297 TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER

Industry-funded academic inventions boost innovation

Brian D Wright, Kyriakos Drivas, Zhen Lei & Stephen A Merrill

University of California data busts myths on licences, patents and citations

300 RENEWABLE ENERGY

Back the renewables boom

Jessika E Trancik

Public-policy support is needed to keep low-carbon technologies on track

BOOKS & ARTS

INFOGRAPHICS

Truth is beauty

The British Library salutes scientific images in its first science exhibition

ON THE COVER

Seen change

The mouse visual system contains several functionally distinct parallel pathways linking the motion detecting cells of the retina to neurons in the superficial layers of primary visual cortex. Directional and orientation selectivity in the cortex appear to arise from the earliest stages of visual processing involving in motion detecting cells in the retina. PAGE 358
