

Archaeologist Chris Fisher leads a team searching for ruins of an ancient city hidden in the jungle in La Mosquitia, Honduras.

102 Lure of the Lost City

Laser-mapping technology uncovers extensive ruins in a Honduran jungle rumored to contain a mythic White City. By Douglas Preston Photographs by Dave Yoder

30

Mystery Man

Fossils found deep in a South African cave raise new questions about what it means to be human.

*By Jamie Shreeve
Photographs by Robert Clark*

58

Wild Heart of Sweden

Glaciers' handiwork surrounds visitors to Lapponia, one of Europe's largest wilderness areas.

*By Dan Belt
Photographs by Orsolya Haarberg and Erlend Haarberg*

74

Lifeblood

The Congo River is the main road through the heart of Africa—for those who dare to travel it.

*By Robert Draper
Photographs by Pascal Maitre*

122

Sea Wolves

Beachcombing wolves swim among Canadian islands, eating whatever the ocean serves up.

*By Susan McGrath
Photographs by Paul Nicklen*

138 Proof | Abstraction Finds Beauty in Beasts

Deconstructing their likenesses can make even terrifying creatures more likable.

Story and Photo Illustrations by Michael D. Kern

On the Cover Paleocartist John Gurche used fossils from a South African cave to reconstruct the face of Homo naledi, the newest addition to the genus Homo. Photo by Mark Thiessen, NGM Staff

Corrections and Clarifications Go to ngm.com/more.